Veto override possible

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Leaders of the Democratically-controlled state legislature are optimistic that the needed two-thirds vote in both the House and Senate can be mustered for the second time this year to override a veto of the governor.

Aides to Gov. Christopher S. Bond agree there is a good possibility for at least 23 of the 34 senators to vote for an override of Bond's veto of revisions in the campaign law.

But they say there is sufficient support for the governor's position in the House to head off enactment of the bill over Bond's objections despite House Speaker Richard Rabbitt's claims that 109 House members will vote against the governor.

While there was less than two-thirds support for the bill in the House last spring, Rabbitt said he expects more members to favor it now because Bond has been able to elude full economic disclosure by means of a blind trust. Bond has claimed that since his assets are in a blind trust, he does not know what they are and would not be susceptible to conflicts of interest.

The legislature convenes later today for no more than 10 days to consider vetoes of the bills passed during last winter's regular session, and leaders, expecting the session to last only a few days, say the only major attempt at an override will be on the campaign law revision.

Last January, the General Assembly enacted new nursing regulations into law over Bond's objection, marking the first veto override in the state since 1839.

Under the campaign law revision, passed in the final moments of the regular session last April, provisions that all political candidates disclose sources of income over $500 would be repealed. They would be replaced with requirements for candidates spending more than $500 in an election to disclose income sources over $6,000 and business interests of more than $10,000.

While the law would lift the economic disclosure requirement from candidates for minor offices, Bond said the legislature went too far in correcting that problem since the revision would also make it possible for many legislative candidates to escape income disclosure.

Common Cause in Missouri, the self-styled citizens lobby, said its own study of campaign reports for the primary election showed that if the revision had been in effect this year 30 per cent of the candidates for the legislature could have eluded disclosure of their sources of income.

But Missourians for Honest Elections, the citizens group that spearheaded the initiative drive two years ago that led to the 4-1 voter approval of the campaign law, has called for enactment of the revision measure even though Bond said it would gut the disclosure sections of the law.

MHE officials have claimed the problems created by the economic disclosure provisions have overshadowed the true intention of the law—to make public campaign contributions and expenditures. They have said the economic disclosure sections are a poor substitute for comprehensive conflict-of-interest legislation and should be totally removed.

While opponents of any override agree, they say they need the burdensome requirements to force the legislature to pass an adequate conflict of interest bill.

While the other vetoes of the governor are not expected to be at issue, those measures that could also be considered are:

—Creation of a special pension plan for county sheriffs.

—Establishment of a statewide property identification program that has already been implemented on a voluntary basis through an executive order.

—$250,000 for the state chest hospital.

—$360,000 for the Ellis Fischel Cancer Hospital.

—$1 million for a special urban hospital aid program.

—$476,000 for the renal disease program at the University of Missouri.

—$2.4 million for a multi-purpose building at the St. Louis State School and Hospital.

Council approves rules for safety department

The City Council Tuesday approved rules and regulations concerning the Public Safety Department and considered a rezoning request, three liquor license applications and three traffic flow changes.

Public safety

The rules and regulations approved by the council include specifics about conduct of public safety officers and a code of ethics.

The rules also contain an organizational chart dividing the department into four divisions — fire, field operations, administration and records and criminal investigation — and listing the responsibilities of each division.

Rezoning

The council tabled a request to rezone six lots along Sixth Street north of Smith Street from single-family to commercial.

The action was requested by John Jenkins, who is considering replacing his substandard home with a mobile home.

The council tabled the matter to give it further consideration and to talk with area property holders.

The council expressed concern that a mobile home could deteriorate in a short time if not properly maintained and that the commercial property could be used for something else later, such as a body shop or garage.

Liquor licenses

A request by Lawrence Luber for a 5 per cent beer consumption license at 207 E. Center St. was tabled for 120 days.

A request by Jim Williams for a 3.2 per cent beer license at 841 W. Malone Ave. was tabled. Williams has a five per cent license for a tavern located in the same building. He wanted the 3.2 per cent license so he would be permitted to sell beer on Sunday.

However, councilmen expressed concern that customers would buy 5 per cent beer at the tavern and then walk over to the 3.2 per cent establishment where a pool table is located.

The council approved a request by Bill Palmer, Ira Shuffit and Randol York for a 3.2 per cent beer license at a new Mexican restaurant at 1501 E. Malone Ave.

Traffic regulations

The council approved a change in the direction of two one-way streets at the request of property owners. Dixie Street, which is now one way north, will become one way south, and Luther Street, which is now one way south, will become one way north.

A stop sign will be placed on Daniel Street at the intersection with School Street.

Other items

The council approved closing the alley that runs from Jaycee Street nearly to Lions Street and lies between Lee Street and West Malone Avenue.

The council approved requiring a 25- foot setback for apartments in which the rear faces the side yard of the home next door.

Also approved was an ordinance requirng that property owners be notified by mail when adjacent land is being considered for subdivision.

The 1975-76 audit of city finances was accepted. The audit showed the city to be in sound financial condition.

The council approved final tax bills to be sent to property owners along two streets just paved. The streets are Frisco, from North Street to Compress Road, and Fuchs, from Osage to North.

Murder trial resumes in Charleston today

CHARLESTON — A recess in the first- degree murder trial of Louie Pool, 80, of East Prairie was called about 8 p.m. Tuesday by Judge Marshall Craig.

Testimony by state witnesses to be called by Prosecuting Attorney Edward C. Graham was scheduled to resume at 9 a.m. today in Mississippi County Circuit Court.

Pool is being tried on first-degree murder charges filed in connection with the Christmas Day 1975 shooting death of Mary Mitchell of East Prairie and Enoch Reeves, 54, of rural Charleston.

Prior to recessing, the jury, composed of eight men and four women empaneled at 2 p.m., heard testimony from 11 prosecution witnesses.

The testimony of Deputy Sheriff Jack Ivie, who was unable to appear due to ill health, was read from the transcript of the Feb. 11 preliminary hearing in Magistrate Court.

Graham charged in his opening statement that Pool deliberately and premeditatively shot and killed Mrs. Mitchell, whom he had been dating for about three years prior to December 1975, and Reeves, whom Mrs. Mitchell was dating at the time of her death, after going to the Mitchell home armed with a .38-caliber pistol.

Opening remarks by the defense claim Pool was acting in self- defense when he shot Reeves and that the shooting of Mrs. Mitchell was accidental.

Jaycees to pay $1,620

The Sikeston Jaycees voted Tuesday night to pay Contemporary Productions of St. Louis $1,620.35, which represents the total cash outlay lost on the Bootheel Jam, which was canceled after being announced as a Labor Day attraction at the Jaycee Bootheel Rodeo Grounds.

A total of $10,695.35 had been invested by Contemporary Productions on the Bootheel Jam, but $9075, in advance deposits to two of the groups scheduled to appear was recovered.

The Jaycees decided at Tuesday night's meeting that since they had requested the proposed concert, it would not be fair for Contemporary Productions to suffer the loss on an event that did not take place. The Jaycees voted to cancel the Bootheel Jam due to an adverse public reaction by the people of Sikeston.

The Jaycees had planned to use their percentage of the net profit from a four- hour show for community projects. Up to 13,000 people had been expected to attend.

Ark-Mo to transfer natural gas properties

Arkansas-Missouri Power Co. has begun proceedings to transfer all of its natural gas properties to a subsidiary firm, associated Natural Gas Co., as part of a program leading to the eventual sale of Associated Natural Gas Co. itself, according to Frank Smith, president of Ark-Mo Power Co.

Smith made the statement Tuesday at a press conference at the Sikeston office of Associated Natural Gas, 112 S. New Madrid St.

Sikeston could eventually become the headquarters for the newly expanded corporation, Smith said.

The firm has been trying to divest itself of all its natural gas properties since 1971 after it was ordered to do so by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

While 87 separate entities have made offers for the properties, Smith said all of the offers have been rejected.

Frank Smith

He said only two offers were for the entire system, and both were amounted to much less than the property is worth. He added that no bids were received for some community systems and the sale of only portions of the system would fragment it and create operational problems.

"In view of the current gas supply situation, Ark-Mo and Associated believe that further attempts to dispose of their gas business at this time would be fruitless," Smith said.

Transferring Ark-Mo's gas properties to Associated, Smith said, "would enable Associated, as an expanded gas corporation, to establish an operating record which could prove a basis for developing a plan for the eventual imposition of Associated by Ark-Mo.

Under the plan, Associated will buy for cash all of the Ark-Mo gas holdings, nearly doubling Associated's size.

The entire process will take several months to complete, Smith said, and hinges on SEC approval. There will be no changes in personel, he said.

Burglars hit mobile homes

NEW MADRID — A mobile home in Lilbourn was burglarized Tuesday morning, and two others located in New Madrid and Marston were hit by burglars sometime over the Labor Day weekend.

Items stolen between 8 and 9 a.m. Tuesday from the Hank Dale mobile home in Lilbourn have been recovered by Marshal Ed Chambliss, who said two suspects — one a juvenile — are in custody of the New Madrid Sheriff's Department pending filing of charges.

Chambliss said two clock radios, a stereo tape deck and a shotgun stolen from the Dale trailer were found hidden in weeds behind the trailer.

A door had been pried open to enter the mobile home.

New Madrid police said burglars entered the mobile home of Steve Hanne, 101 Cabanna Court, and took stereo albums and tape cartridges. A north window had been broken. The break-in is believed to have occurred Friday night.

Taken from the trailer, located on an Interstate 55 outer road at the Route EE interchange at Marston, were a portable black and white television and a radio.

A window had been pried open to enter the trailer.

School bus overturns

Eleven persons—including six children who were passengers in a school bus that overturned—were injured in four area traffic accidents Tuesday, according to the highway patrol.

The school bus accident occurred at 3:30 p.m. on Route D four miles southeast of Greenville when a Murray Watts, 45, of Wappapello, lost control of an eastbound bus as he met a lime truck near the center line, pulled to the right and the right wheel dropped off the pavement, causing the vehicle to run off the opposite side of the road and overturn when he cut back onto the pavement.

The injured students included Glen A. Crutchfield, 15, and Varvel Crutchfield, 14, of Greenville, Mealnie Matchett, 16, of Shook and Kennedy Adams, 12, Regina Adams, 15, and Rhonda Adams, 14, of Wappapello.

All six received minor injuries and were taken to Doctors Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

A three-vehicle accident at 2:20 p.m. at the junction of Highways 67, 160 and 158 eight miles south of Poplar Bluff caused moderate injuries to an Arkansas motorist and his wife.

The accident occurred when a car driven west by James Daniels, 74, of Poplar Bluff pulled into the left side of a car driven south on Highway 67 by Francis Charlie Arnold, 53, of Success, Ark., which then struck an eastbound car driven by Bobby June Coan, 42, of Harviell. Arnold and his wife, Harriet Arnold, 49, received injuries and were taken to Doctors Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

A Lake Tahoe, Calif., man received moderate injuries and a Nashville, Tenn., man received minor injuries in an accident involving two moving vehicles and three that were parked at 5:30 p.m. on Highway 67 one mile north of Neelyville.

The accident occurred when Dean Alcorn, 32, Lake Tahoe attempted to pass a car driven by Harold Rosson, 60, of Nashville, which was turning north on Highway 67, and Alcorn's pickup truck sideswiped the Rosson vehicle then ran off the road and struck three parked vehicles.

Alcorn was taken to Lucy Lee Hospital in Poplar Bluff and Rosson said he would seek his own treatment.

A Fenton woman received minor injuries at 12:20 p.m. when her car ran off the road, skidded into a tree and overturned, eight miles north of Poplar Bluff on Highway 67.

IMPLICATIONS OF THE RHODESIAN WAR

The communist powers seem to be preparing another test of American resolve in southern Africa. The proving ground this time around will be Rhodesia, which is now coming under intensified guerrilla attack from both neighboring Zambia and Mozambique. If reports from Mozambique are correct, Soviet and Cuban military advisors are showing up in that country to aid in the attack. This again could be the camel's nose in the tent. If there is no Western reaction, then Cuban troops themselves will possibly follow.

Such outside forces could very well be necessary to force a decision, because the Rhodesian whites still will not captiulate on the issue of black rule. They see this as being the end of the line for them; so they have settled in for a long seige. The drawbridge has been raised, so to speak, by the decree that those whites who leave will be able to take out a maxmimum of $1600 per family. This stongly discourages white emigration.

So it looks like the Rhodesian whites will continue to fight. Their recent retaliatory raid into Mozambique demonstrates a determination to carry that fight to their tormentors. This in turn could force the blacks to ask for more active communist military support if they wish to bring the conflict to any kind of speedy conclusion. The Soviets and Cubans, we think, will be more than happy to comply.

This will put the fat in the fire. Henry Kissinger has been pushing the double line that a) the U.S. will not give any moral or material help to Rhodesian whites, but b) neither will we tolerate any further communist military adventures in Africa or elsewhere. If the communists now join in the attack on Rhodesia, what does the U.S. do?

Whatever one may think of the Rhodesian cause, we believe the U.S. must not allow that country to become another Angola. If the whites there are overwhelmed as a result of communist military intervention, the precedent will be set for a similar attack on South Africa, and in that direction lies true catastrophe. South Africa, and in that direction lies true catastrophe. South Africa has nuclear capabilities.

For us Americans, the developing situation in southern Africa should have far more than academic interest. It has sinister implications for the peace of the world.

ROB PETER TO PAY PAUL

Rolling ahead with full steam is an initiative petition being curculated in the state to exempt food and medicine from the Missouri sales tax. Results of the petition campaign clearly indicate enough signatures are being obtained to put the proposal on the ballot in November.

Quite understandably, an opportunity for elimination of a tax has universal appeal for taxpayers when viewed superficially. More often than not an in-depth evaluation of its consequences wipes out the attractiveness of such a proposition for those willing to be realistic about it.

If the Missouri sales tax were to be removed from food and medicine, from $150 million to $180 million in state revenue would be washed out. Common sense dictates that such an extensive loss in state funds would have to be replaced by higher state taxes.

Major programs in the state are already suffering from lack of funding. They include welfare, schools, mental health and higher education among others.

To eliminate sales tax from certain items which would force a tax increase on others, or necessitate levying a new tax of some kind, is a simple case of robbing Peter to pay Paul. The taxpayer gains nothing and by a shuffle of taxes it is entirely possible he could wind up paying more.

According to a reliable tax authority in Jefferson City, 130 Missouri cities now collecting a local sales tax—and Warrensburg is one of them—would lose a fifth to a fourth of their revenue from that source if sales tax is removed from food and medicine.

What that would mean for the City of Warrensburg comes through loud and clear. In the last fiscal year revenue from our one-cent city sales tax totaled $356,620.49. If the city sustained a loss of one-fifth of that, it would amount to $71,324.09. Should the loss go to one-fourth, the amount would go to $89,155.12.

This represents a substantial annual reduction in Warrensburg's fiscal capability for capital improvement construction. Since ten per cent of the revenue from city sales tax is earmarked for our parks, the park department would be a target for ten per cent of the city's lost revenue.

Basic to the argument given by supporters of the petition is the purported benefit for those who suffer from povery or are on fixed incomes. Their actual benefit, which would be from three to four per cent, is negligible. It scarcely exists for the truly needy, since they are presently under state assistance programs for welfare and health care.

Approximately $15.5 million are paid out by the state for medicine alone to more than a quarter million welfare recipients. Many of them receive aid from the food stamp program along with countless others who do not qualify as truly needy.

Those who would reap the greatest benefit from tax exemption on food and medicine are the affluent citizens of the state. This is a fact to be emphasized.

Each of us had better think twice about the consequences before going all out to support this exemption.

We could find ourselves being taxed more heavily on other commodities and services as a result.

SCIENTISTS CHALLENGE CULTISTS' CLAIMS

One of the puzzles of our time is why — in an age when science has conquered many major diseases, has sent men to the moon and instruments to the nearer planets and has put the world into instantaneous communication with itself — we should be witnessing a proliferation of pseudoscientific cults, fringe religious groups, "pop" psychology movements and the like.

If all these are signs of a society in search of answers to questions which orthodox science and religion ignores, or has no satisfactory answers to, then this has to be the most restless generation in history. Or perhaps the most gullible.

Every age has had its similar groups and movements. But the last decade "has brought on a flood of interest in what is variously called fringe science, borderline science, pseudoscience, paranormal phenomena, occultism, mysticism, the cults of unreason, the new irrationalism or the new nonsense," write Kendrick Frazier in Science News.

Ancient astronauts, astrology, the Bermuda Triangle UFOs, psychokinesis, psychic healing, Kirlian photography, pyramid power, reincarnation, immortality, astral projection, lost continents, plant communication — one has to go only as far as the nearest magazine stand to find publications on these and other subjects in abundant quantities.

Some 140 million Americans are involved in fringe religious cults, such as spiritualism, Hare Khrishna and Scientology, according to University of Chicago anthropologist Irving Zaretsky, who recently completed a 10-year period as a participant-observer in many of these groups.

"The number may be much larger," says Zaretsky, "and it includes a great many respectable, middle-class and upperclass people who may also belong to traditional religious groups. It is hard to get accurate numbers because cult participation is often an occasional, 'one-shot' experience rather than a continuing membership."

So many people are turning to pop psychologies in the 1970s, says Dr. William Rickles, chief of the clinical and psychological laboratory at the Veterans Administration in Sepulveda, Calif., that "I feel the pop psychology movement is very much taking the place of religion."

In what is probably the most publicized example of this phenomenon, Erhard Seminars Training (est) has, in the four years since it began, "processed" 70,000 people at $250 each. Similar "consciousness industry" vendors are doing almost as well.

The typical scientist's reaction to all this is usually to throw up his hands in disgust, mutter about the naivete and gullibility of the general public, turn back to his experiments and forget it, says Frazier.

But now there is something new on the scene, at least in the field of pseudoscience, he reports — a group of scholars, scientists and investigators determined to challenge the claims of the cultists. The formation of a Committee for the Scientific Investigation of Claims of the Paranormal was announced last spring at the meeting of the American Humanist Association in Buffalo, NY.

"Perhaps antiscientific and pseudoscientific irrationalism is a passing fashion," says the committee's co-chairman Paul Kurtz, professor of philosophy at the State University of New York in Buffalo and editor of The Humanist. "Yet one of the best ways to deal with it is for the scientific and educational community to respond — in a responsible manner — to its alarming growth."

The committee intends to function like a consumer information group, providing the public and the news media with access to facts by which they can judge the validity of unusual claims.

TOO MANY CHIEFS

Some new statistics have emerged which are truly frightening, illustrating, as they do, a possible threat to the physical fitness of the men and women in the Armed Forces of the United States. It appears they might all wind up with "tennis elbow" from saluting each other. This danger lies in the fact that there are seven times as many generals or admirals today per soldier as there were 30 years ago. Since generals and admirals normally do not carry out their own orders or work intimately with enlisted men, there must presumedly be a considerable increase in the numbers of lower grade officers like ensigns and captains and majors. With all the saluting that must go on, everyone in the service, from flag rank down, could very easily wind up with sore elbows or bursitis. Come the next national emergency, there might be no one around in good enough shape to pick up a rifle or reach out to push a button. Uncle Sam might have to call time-out for a little concentrated physical therapy before he could properly defend himself.

P.S. TO THE NEWS

By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

The world has been watching the Dutch government handle the embarrasing case of a very high official who engaged in improper actions.

When allegations were made six months ago that Prince Bernhard of The Netherlands might have accepted more than a million dollars in bribes from Lockheed Aircraft Corp., the Dutch government set up a quiet commission of inquiry. There were no months of public Watergate-type hearings with sensational daily exposes.

The recently released final report was firm in its conclusions about the princes' "unacceptable" relationship with Lockheed, and it stripped him of all his military and business positions. At the same time, however, the government accepted his statement of apology and regret and announced there was "no possibility" of criminal prosecution.

One of the most attractive and charming speakers with whom I have ever shared the platform, Prince Berhard speaks English like an American. Among the some 300 organizations to to which he has lent his name and patronage are the World Wildlife Foundation and the Bilderbergers, an annual conclave of the most powerful men in the Western world which he hosts every spring.

The Bilderbergers take their name from the hotel in Holland where they held their first meeting in 1954. They have met 24 times in remote and exclusive resorts carefully chosen to combine the ultimate in luxury with the maximum of security, such as Lake como in Italy, Knokke in Belgium, Saltsjobaden in Sweden, Megeve in France and Cesme in Turkey.

These meetings are redundantly policed by security forces that outnumber the guests, the lake side of the hotel is guarded by naval vessels, the land side by goverment troops and often by the canine corps.

The 80 to 100 Bilderbergers who attend each year come from three different classes.

First there are the financial giants of the Western world, such as David and Nelson Rockefeller, Henry Ford II, Baron Rothschild of France, Baron Lambert of Belgium, Giovanni Angelli of Italy, owner of Fiat, Baron Wallenberg of Sweden and Robert S. McNamara of the World Bank.

Second, there are a few influential newsmen who can be relied upon never to report what was said in the secret sessions. Over the years, these have included representatives from The New York Times, Time magazine, Newsweek, Foreign Affairs, Harper's and the New Yorker.

Third the Bilderbergers include those specially chosen to advance to high office.

At the 1957 conference at Sea Island, Ga., the participants included the then- unknown names of McGeorge Bundy, Dean Rusk and Henry Kissinger, who later rose to become the principal foreign policy advisers, respectively, to Presidents Kennedy, Johnson, Nixon and Ford.

Later meetings were attended by Congressman Gerald R. Ford and by Zbigniew Brzezinski, who is Jimmy Carter's "Henry Kissinger."

Although the Bilderbergers are considered the most powerful and secretive group in the free world, no reporter ever aks them what was decided at their meetings and no congressional committee ever invites them to explain their decisions.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Inside White House:
An Oval Office Insider Reflects Confidentially On Ford's Reaction to Labor's Hammering

WASHINGTON -- A lot of heart, yearning, sweat and toil went into President Ford's convention acceptance speech -- but the nationally significant story is in what wasn't written into it.

"Deliberately," no mention was made of special interest groups. No appeal to blacks. nor to "hispanic origin," et al. Nor to the pluralism of this sprawling nation's religions.

And, as the President and his close colleagues sit and muse over what in earlier days would have been dubbed the "game plan," the philosphical thrust of his campaign becomes sharper. So do his and his President Ford Committee's stratagems for countering George Meany's massive labor make- or- break drive to crush the Republican party.

Sure, Jerry Ford's political activist old friend from Michigan Elly Peterson is working on launching a labor committee to reach for the 23 million duespayers and their families. She's the President Ford Committee's deputy chairman for special groups. That's standard operating procedural campaigning. But the President is a realist. Even with a helmet he wouldn't go crashing straight into labor chief Meany's lineup.

But, neither is Mr. Ford planning to abandon all hopes for heavy union rank- and- file support. He's an old blocking center, and that's how he'll play it. As an extremely authoritative voice from the Oval Office puts it, this will be an "every man (and woman) campaign."

"In Ford's acceptance speech we didn't talk about blacks or other minorities, " said the voice. "We just alked about everybody. That was deliberate. We talked about -- and will continue to talk about right through November -- America in general.

"In the speech we didn't pick out any particular kind. Deliberately. We didn't pitch for the interest groups. We're just not going to do that. We're going in for equal appeals. That's our bid for the labor vote, because that's part of America, isn't it? And that's what government's for."

There are special surveys, reports and polls on the President's desk. One particularly interests him and the handful of strategists working on the "substantive" policies while the President Ford Committee does the politicking and old Army platoon leader Sen. Dole hits the hustings with war cries charging that the enemy is taking orders from big labor.

This survey , which has been analyzed and re-analyzed, shows a dramatically sharp change in priorities of the average young married couple and new family. Says one of the Oval Office intimates: "We find that over the past 10 years their basic interests have changed. Your married couples' (in the middle-income brackets) driving interest used to be to have the husband get a better job, get promoted and earn more money. But now they have new priorities. They want to own their own home, their own piece of gound with green around it."

But now because costs and interest charges are so high they're less able to accomplish this, said President Ford's adviser.

"Now it's gotten out of their reach,"he continued, reflecting Mr. Ford's personal reflections. "In this survey we find that women are working not because their men can't be the breadwinners, but to save up nesteggs to enable them to make some of the large payments on a home and for their kids' education.

"This yearning for home ownership is a very telling thing. So we want to help them. Our government programs have been directed at rental stuff. Now we're moving in a direction to figure out how to get them into the home building era. This goes right to the average yearnings of the average earners. And this would have a double blessing -- we would go right to the heart of the people and would stimulate building and construction and help put the jobless in that field back to work."

Perhaps this is what has kept the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department president Robert Georgine coming quietly into the White House from time to time -- and moved him to fly out to the Republican convention for a day or so.

So the Oval Office isn't planning to run around Meany's broad- beamed back. Nor go over his head. Nor to blast him. Rather, Jerry Ford will reach out for the "average guy" and "the little guy." The President will appeal to the family which is worried about its savings being eaten up, harassed by the fear of losing what seemed to be permanent jobs, frightened by the thought of catastrophic illness, angered by busing of schoolchildren or apprenhensive of what may happen to "the old folks."

"It will be an appeal to Americans for Ford, not labor for Ford," ssaid the voice. "said the voice. "We will tell them we aren't kidding you. The Democrats are. They will promise a hell of a lot and you will pay for it. Who else?"

Thus the thrust will be a refutation of the triphammer labor attacks on the Republicans' alleged responsiblity for inflation, ill health and economic insecurity.

"We think we've got inflation beat," said the Oval Office chap. "We believe the average American is living a pretty good life. That's what we'll tell them. If we can't convince them, at least we won't be lying. So there's the answer to your question. That's our apprach to American labor. We're not reaching for any special interest group but we'll fight for any group getting clobbered by anyone."

It could work. We'll know after the big count in November.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Wheeler-Dealer Faces U.S. Wrath

by Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- International wheeler-dealer Adnan Khashoggi may soon face criminal charges unless he reveals what he knows about millions of dollars in foreign payoffs by American firms.

The dashing Khashoggi, a close friend of the Saudi Arabian royal family, is the target of an intensive investigation by the Justice Department and the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Government prosecutors will soon decide whether to charge him criminally or to file civil contempt charges against him to force him to testify. There is a remote possibility, of course, that they will simply drop the case.

As an intimate of princes and generals, Khashoggi was in a position to recommend that Saudi contracts worth hundreds of millions be awarded to U.S. firms. He commanded huge fees for his middleman role.

What has been publicly revealed so far about Khashoggi's involvement with American contractors, officals and politicians, according to sources close to the investigation, only scratches the surface.

These disclosures, nevertheless, have rocked the business world. Lockheed admitted it paid him $106 million. Northrop and General Tire also reportedly passed him fat commisssions.

Khashoggi once told the Washington Post how he blocked a $250,000 Northrop bribe intended for a Saudi general. "I stopped the bribe," he crowed. "I put it in my pocket."

Lately, he has been more discreet. And now, he appears to be dodging a U.S. subpoena for his records and testimony. The investigators are presently considering whether to charge him with non-compliance with the subpoena.

Such a charge would make it risky for Khashoggi to return to the United States. If he does, he could be put in jail for up to a year, unless he produces the documents.

Footnote: Khashoggi could not be reached for comment. In the past, he has claimed all payments to him were legitimate.

WHITE COLLAR RIOT: Prison riots usually afflict only maximum security penitentiaries such as Attica in New York.

But last month at the minimum security Allenwood prison farm in Pennsylvania, the white collar criminals came close to revolt when food labeled "Not Fit For Human Consumption" was delivered to the prison kitchen.

The food was purchased from a nearby Army base that was closing down. Inmates told us that the kitchen ordered "food waste" from the Army as a cost-cutting measure and intended it for use as prison fare.

But the marked bags of waste were spotted by the inmates on delivery and sparked talk of protest demonstrations.

Warden Eldon Jensen told us it was all a bueaucratic snafu. He said the prison thought it was buying surplus food plus some bags of waste food suitable only for animals. But instead, it was all marked "waste," so the Warden had all $9,000 worth destroyed.

Some of the inmates still suspect, however, that prison officials planned to serve the adulterated food. One bag was actually discovered in the kitchen food storage room.

Warden Jensen has filed a report on the incident with the Bureau of Prisons. But all of the paperwork from the food buying transaction has now mysteriously disappeared from Allenwood. The inmates suspect an official coverup and want the Bureau of Prisons to investigate.

APPALACHIA NIGHTMARE: Strip miners are literally blasting the impoverished residents of Appalachia out of their homes. Walls have been cracked, windows shattered and a child hit by flying rock.

The Federal Bureau of Mines, which is supposed to give some protection to the strip miners' neighbors, has devoted less than one per cent of its budget to this problem.

A study by the Center for Science in the Public Interest charges that the blasting caused "over $200 million damage in 1975 to 10,000 private citizens." Over the past ten years, 75,000 people have been affected and the damage has exceeded $1.5 billion.

The blasting has used almost as much explosive power as was expended per square mile in the Vietnam war. Terrain has been torn up. In some localities, wells have caved in and the water table is falling.

The explosions have also produced serious human problems. A child playing in a yard was hit by flying stone. A woman lost two houses from the erratic vibrations. And it is the victims, not the mine owners, who pay for repairs.

The Bureau of Mines has the power to end some of the devastation by issuing new guidelines for state enforcement agencies. But they plan to wait almost two years before taking action.

Footnote: Mines Bureau Chief Thomas Falkie told our reporter Chris Wright that further study is needed before new regulations can be issued. He said the Center's facts are not well-documented.

But the last decade "has brought on a flood of interest in what is variously called fringe science, borderline science, pseudoscience, paranormal phenomena, occultism, mysticism, the cults of unreason, the new irrationalism or the new nonsense," write Kendrick Frazier in Science News.

Ancient astronauts, astrology, the Bermuda Triangle UFOs, psychokinesis, psychic healing, Kirlian photography, pyramid power, reincarnation, immortality, astral projection, lost continents, plant communication — one has to go only as far as the nearest magazine stand to find publications on these and other subjects in abundant quantities.

Some 140 million Americans are involved in fringe religious cults, such as spiritualism, Hare Khrishna and Scientology, according to University of Chicago anthropologist Irving Zaretsky, who recently completed a 10-year period as a participant-observer in many of these groups.

"The number may be much larger," says Zaretsky, "and it includes a great many respectable, middle-class and upperclass people who may also belong to traditional religious groups. It is hard to get accurate numbers because cult participation is often an occasional, 'one-shot' experience rather than a continuing membership."

So many people are turning to pop psychologies in the 1970s, says Dr. William Rickles, chief of the clinical and psychological laboratory at the Veterans Administration in Sepulveda, Calif., that "I feel the pop psychology movement is very much taking the place of religion."

In what is probably the most publicized example of this phenomenon, Erhard Seminars Training (est) has, in the four years since it began, "processed" 70,000 people at $250 each. Similar "consciousness industry" vendors are doing almost as well.

The typical scientist's reaction to all this is usually to throw up his hands in disgust, mutter about the naivete and gullibility of the general public, turn back to his experiments and forget it, says Frazier.

But now there is something new on the scene, at least in the field of pseudoscience, he reports — a group of scholars, scientists and investigators determined to challenge the claims of the cultists. The formation of a Committee for the Scientific Investigation of Claims of the Paranormal was announced last spring at the meeting of the American Humanist Association in Buffalo, NY.

"Perhaps antiscientific and pseudoscientific irrationalism is a passing fashion," says the committee's co-chairman Paul Kurtz, professor of philosophy at the State University of New York in Buffalo and editor of The Humanist. "Yet one of the best ways to deal with it is for the scientific and educational community to respond — in a responsible manner — to its alarming growth."

The committee intends to function like a consumer information group, providing the public and the news media with access to facts by which they can judge the validity of unusual claims.

TOO MANY CHIEFS

Some new statistics have emerged which are truly frightening, illustrating, as they do, a possible threat to the physical fitness of the men and women in the Armed Forces of the United States. It appears they might all wind up with "tennis elbow" from saluting each other. This danger lies in the fact that there are seven times as many generals or admirals today per soldier as there were 30 years ago. Since generals and admirals normally do not carry out their own orders or work intimately with enlisted men, there must presumedly be a considerable increase in the numbers of lower grade officers like ensigns and captains and majors. With all the saluting that must go on, everyone in the service, from flag rank down, could very easily wind up with sore elbows or bursitis. Come the next national emergency, there might be no one around in good enough shape to pick up a rifle or reach out to push a button. Uncle Sam might have to call time-out for a little concentrated physical therapy before he could properly defend himself.

P.S. TO THE NEWS

By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

The world has been watching the Dutch government handle the embarrasing case of a very high official who engaged in improper actions.

When allegations were made six months ago that Prince Bernhard of The Netherlands might have accepted more than a million dollars in bribes from Lockheed Aircraft Corp., the Dutch government set up a quiet commission of inquiry. There were no months of public Watergate-type hearings with sensational daily exposes.

The recently released final report was firm in its conclusions about the princes' "unacceptable" relationship with Lockheed, and it stripped him of all his military and business positions. At the same time, however, the government accepted his statement of apology and regret and announced there was "no possibility" of criminal prosecution.

One of the most attractive and charming speakers with whom I have ever shared the platform, Prince Berhard speaks English like an American. Among the some 300 organizations to to which he has lent his name and patronage are the World Wildlife Foundation and the Bilderbergers, an annual conclave of the most powerful men in the Western world which he hosts every spring.

The Bilderbergers take their name from the hotel in Holland where they held their first meeting in 1954. They have met 24 times in remote and exclusive resorts carefully chosen to combine the ultimate in luxury with the maximum of security, such as Lake como in Italy, Knokke in Belgium, Saltsjobaden in Sweden, Megeve in France and Cesme in Turkey.

These meetings are redundantly policed by security forces that outnumber the guests, the lake side of the hotel is guarded by naval vessels, the land side by goverment troops and often by the canine corps.

The 80 to 100 Bilderbergers who attend each year come from three different classes.

First there are the financial giants of the Western world, such as David and Nelson Rockefeller, Henry Ford II, Baron Rothschild of France, Baron Lambert of Belgium, Giovanni Angelli of Italy, owner of Fiat, Baron Wallenberg of Sweden and Robert S. McNamara of the World Bank.

Second, there are a few influential newsmen who can be relied upon never to report what was said in the secret sessions. Over the years, these have included representatives from The New York Times, Time magazine, Newsweek, Foreign Affairs, Harper's and the New Yorker.

Third the Bilderbergers include those specially chosen to advance to high office.

At the 1957 conference at Sea Island, Ga., the participants included the then- unknown names of McGeorge Bundy, Dean Rusk and Henry Kissinger, who later rose to become the principal foreign policy advisers, respectively, to Presidents Kennedy, Johnson, Nixon and Ford.

Later meetings were attended by Congressman Gerald R. Ford and by Zbigniew Brzezinski, who is Jimmy Carter's "Henry Kissinger."

Although the Bilderbergers are considered the most powerful and secretive group in the free world, no reporter ever aks them what was decided at their meetings and no congressional committee ever invites them to explain their decisions.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Inside White House:

An Oval Office Insider Reflects Confidentially On Ford's Reaction to Labor's Hammering

WASHINGTON -- A lot of heart, yearning, sweat and toil went into President Ford's convention acceptance speech -- but the nationally significant story is in what wasn't written into it.

"Deliberately," no mention was made of special interest groups. No appeal to blacks. nor to "hispanic origin," et al. Nor to the pluralism of this sprawling nation's religions.

And, as the President and his close colleagues sit and muse over what in earlier days would have been dubbed the "game plan," the philosphical thrust of his campaign becomes sharper. So do his and his President Ford Committee's stratagems for countering George Meany's massive labor make- or- break drive to crush the Republican party.

Sure, Jerry Ford's political activist old friend from Michigan Elly Peterson is working on launching a labor committee to reach for the 23 million duespayers and their families. She's the President Ford Committee's deputy chairman for special groups. That's standard operating procedural campaigning. But the President is a realist. Even with a helmet he wouldn't go crashing straight into labor chief Meany's lineup.

But, neither is Mr. Ford planning to abandon all hopes for heavy union rank- and- file support. He's an old blocking center, and that's how he'll play it. As an extremely authoritative voice from the Oval Office puts it, this will be an "every man (and woman) campaign."

"In Ford's acceptance speech we didn't talk about blacks or other minorities, " said the voice. "We just alked about everybody. That was deliberate. We talked about -- and will continue to talk about right through November -- America in general.

"In the speech we didn't pick out any particular kind. Deliberately. We didn't pitch for the interest groups. We're just not going to do that. We're going in for equal appeals. That's our bid for the labor vote, because that's part of America, isn't it? And that's what government's for."

There are special surveys, reports and polls on the President's desk. One particularly interests him and the handful of strategists working on the "substantive" policies while the President Ford Committee does the politicking and old Army platoon leader Sen. Dole hits the hustings with war cries charging that the enemy is taking orders from big labor.

This survey , which has been analyzed and re-analyzed, shows a dramatically sharp change in priorities of the average young married couple and new family. Says one of the Oval Office intimates: "We find that over the past 10 years their basic interests have changed. Your married couples' (in the middle-income brackets) driving interest used to be to have the husband get a better job, get promoted and earn more money. But now they have new priorities. They want to own their own home, their own piece of gound with green around it."

But now because costs and interest charges are so high they're less able to accomplish this, said President Ford's adviser.

"Now it's gotten out of their reach," he continued, reflecting Mr. Ford's personal reflections. "In this survey we find that women are working not because their men can't be the breadwinners, but to save up nesteggs to enable them to make some of the large payments on a home and for their kids' education.

"This yearning for home ownership is a very telling thing. So we want to help them. Our government programs have been directed at rental stuff. Now we're moving in a direction to figure out how to get them into the home building era. This goes right to the average yearnings of the average earners. And this would have a double blessing -- we would go right to the heart of the people and would stimulate building and construction and help put the jobless in that field back to work."

Perhaps this is what has kept the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department president Robert Georgine coming quietly into the White House from time to time -- and moved him to fly out to the Republican convention for a day or so.

So the Oval Office isn't planning to run around Meany's broad- beamed back. Nor go over his head. Nor to blast him. Rather, Jerry Ford will reach out for the "average guy" and "the little guy." The President will appeal to the family which is worried about its savings being eaten up, harassed by the fear of losing what seemed to be permanent jobs, frightened by the thought of catastrophic illness, angered by busing of schoolchildren or apprenhensive of what may happen to "the old folks."

"It will be an appeal to Americans for Ford, not labor for Ford," ssaid the voice." said the voice. "We will tell them we aren't kidding you. The Democrats are. They will promise a hell of a lot and you will pay for it. Who else?"

Thus the thrust will be a refutation of the triphammer labor attacks on the Republicans' alleged responsiblity for inflation, ill health and economic insecurity.

"We think we've got inflation beat," said the Oval Office chap. "We believe the average American is living a pretty good life. That's what we'll tell them. If we can't convince them, at least we won't be lying. So there's the answer to your question. That's our approach to American labor. We're not reaching for any special interest group but we'll fight for any group getting clobbered by anyone."

It could work. We'll know after the big count in November.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

by Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- International wheeler-dealer Adnan Khashoggi may soon face criminal charges unless he reveals what he knows about millions of dollars in foreign payoffs by American firms.

The dashing Khashoggi, a close friend of the Saudi Arabian royal family, is the target of an intensive investigation by the Justice Department and the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Government prosecutors will soon decide whether to charge him criminally or to file civil contempt charges against him to force him to testify. There is a remote possibility, of course, that they will simply drop the case.

As an intimate of princes and generals, Khashoggi was in a position to recommend that Saudi contracts worth hundreds of millions be awarded to U.S. firms. He commanded huge fees for his middleman role.

What has been publicly revealed so far about Khashoggi's involvement with American contractors, officals and politicians, according to sources close to the investigation, only scratches the surface.

These disclosures, nevertheless, have rocked the business world. Lockheed admitted it paid him $106 million. Northrop and General Tire also reportedly passed him fat commisssions.

Khashoggi once told the Washington Post how he blocked a $250,000 Northrop bribe intended for a Saudi general. "I stopped the bribe," he crowed. "I put it in my pocket."

Lately, he has been more discreet. And now, he appears to be dodging a U.S. subpoena for his records and testimony. The investigators are presently considering whether to charge him with non-compliance with the subpoena.

Such a charge would make it risky for Khashoggi to return to the United States. If he does, he could be put in jail for up to a year, unless he produces the documents.

Footnote: Khashoggi could not be reached for comment. In the past, he has claimed all payments to him were legitimate.

But last month at the minimum security Allenwood prison farm in Pennsylvania, the white collar criminals came close to revolt when food labeled "Not Fit For Human Consumption" was delivered to the prison kitchen.

The food was purchased from a nearby Army base that was closing down. Inmates told us that the kitchen ordered "food waste" from the Army as a cost-cutting measure and intended it for use as prison fare.

But the marked bags of waste were spotted by the inmates on delivery and sparked talk of protest demonstrations.

Warden Eldon Jensen told us it was all a bueaucratic snafu. He said the prison thought it was buying surplus food plus some bags of waste food suitable only for animals. But instead, it was all marked "waste," so the Warden had all $9,000 worth destroyed.

Some of the inmates still suspect, however, that prison officials planned to serve the adulterated food. One bag was actually discovered in the kitchen food storage room.

Warden Jensen has filed a report on the incident with the Bureau of Prisons. But all of the paperwork from the food buying transaction has now mysteriously disappeared from Allenwood. The inmates suspect an official coverup and want the Bureau of Prisons to investigate.

APPALACHIA NIGHTMARE: Strip miners are literally blasting the impoverished residents of Appalachia out of their homes. Walls have been cracked, windows shattered and a child hit by flying rock.

The Federal Bureau of Mines, which is supposed to give some protection to the strip miners' neighbors, has devoted less than one per cent of its budget to this problem.

A study by the Center for Science in the Public Interest charges that the blasting caused "over $200 million damage in 1975 to 10,000 private citizens." Over the past ten years, 75,000 people have been affected and the damage has exceeded $1.5 billion.

The blasting has used almost as much explosive power as was expended per square mile in the Vietnam war. Terrain has been torn up. In some localities, wells have caved in and the water table is falling.

The explosions have also produced serious human problems. A child playing in a yard was hit by flying stone. A woman lost two houses from the erratic vibrations. And it is the victims, not the mine owners, who pay for repairs.

The Bureau of Mines has the power to end some of the devastation by issuing new guidelines for state enforcement agencies. But they plan to wait almost two years before taking action.

Footnote: Mines Bureau Chief Thomas Falkie told our reporter Chris Wright that further study is needed before new regulations can be issued. He said the Center's facts are not well-documented.

Festival crowns junior royalty

PORTAGEVILLE — The junior king and queen of the 29th annual National Soy Soybean Festival were crowned Tuesday night in a revue for 4 and 5 - year- olds at Portageville High School. Troy Wymer, 4- year- old son of Mr. and Mrs. Todd Wymer of West Plains, was crowned King, and Kristi Lewis, 5- year- old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Lewis of Lilbourn, was selected queen.

Travis Baird, 4, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Baird of Portageville, and Melissa Long, 4, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Troy Long of Portageville, were named first alternates.

Chosen second alternates were Joey Kellams, 5, and Stacy Lynn Adams, 4, both of Portageville. Their parents are Mr. and Mrs. Kelly Kellams, and Mr. and Mrs. Ronnie Adams.

Each of the winners was presented a trophy, and each contestant received a toy gift.

The contest was sponsored for the 11th consecutive year by Iota Rho Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority.

The festival continues tonight with a kiddie parade down Main Street, beginning at 7:30 p.m. Cash awards will be presented to winners in six divisions, which include mini-floats, maxi-floats, costumed walking characters, decorated tricycles, decorated bicycles and decorated pets.

Memorial gifts total $4,666

NEW MADRID — Nearly one-fourth of all monies entrusted to the American Cancer Society in Missouri is contributed through the memorial gift fund program. Memorial gift contributions help make possible the society's year-round threefold programs of research, education and service, according to Barbara C. Stoffer, 802 Maple St., who is a year- round volunteer and serves as the memorial gift fund program chairman of the New Madrid County ACS unit.

For the year ending Aug. 31, Mrs. Stoffer reports memorial gift contributions totaling $4,666. This amount represents many contributions in memory of 46 persons, most of whom were citizens of New Madrid County.

All memorial gift contributions mailed to Mrs. Stoffer become a part of the ACS crusade total in New Madrid County. Each memorial gift is promptly acknowledged and a memoriam card is sent to the family of the deceased advising that a memorial gift has been received and from whom.

"Memorial gift contributions are received from many sources – from civic and service clubs and organizations, from business and industry, from home extension clubs, church, school and professional groups, as well as neighborhood collections, anonymous gifts and a large number of gifts are received from individuals in remembrance of a co-worker or associate, a neighbor, friend or relative," Mrs. Stoffer said.

"I'll be glad to discuss the memorial gift fund program of the society with anyone desiring more information. And, too, pre-addressed envelopes, designed for memorial giving, may be obtained at any funeral home establishment in New Madrid County," she added.

10 medicines become non-prescription drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration said today it will allow 10 strong medicines, available until now only on a doctor's orders, to be sold without prescription. The drugs are used to treat symptoms of coughs, cold, allergies and asthma.

The agency predicted the decision, coming just ahead of the traditional season for colds and hay fever, will save consumers money by reducing trips to the doctor's office and time lost from work. The average American suffers three colds each year, experts say.

A panel of outside scientists had recommended the action on the basis of its three-year study of the 35,000 to 50,000 cough and cold remedies sold without prescription.

The panel also said:

—No non-prescription cough or cold drug should contain more than three active ingredients, and each of them must be from a different group such as cough suppressant, nasal decongestant and antihistamines.

—The FDA should require labels on non-prescription cough-and-cold remedies to be more specific, emphasize that the products give only temporary relief from symptoms rather than cure the ailments, carry warnings if aspirin is present, and advise patients to see a doctor if the problem persists.

—There is no scientific justification for the claim that vitamin C prevents or cures a common cold. The report recommended against approving it for that purpose until controlled clinical studies prove it is effective.

The FDA decided to allow the sale of the 10 strong drugs immediately. The panel's other recommendations were being reviewed by FDA officials, although Sherwin Gardner, acting FDA commissioner, indicated that he agreed that over-the-counter drugs should have more detailed labels.

The advisory panel had recommended removing 14 cough-and-cold drugs from the prescription list, but the FDA said it disagreed on three of the drugs and was deferring a decision on another.

The drugs that now can be marketed without prescription are products containing the antihistamines brompheniramine and chlorpheniramine, the bronchodilators methoxyphenamine and theophylline in three forms, and the nasal decongestants oxymetazone, xylometacoline and pseudoephedrine in two forms.

Danforth attacks Kennedy health insurance program

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Refundable tax credits for the purchase of private health insurance are more practical than comprehensive national health insurance, Republican U.S. Senate candidate John C. Danforth said Tuesday.

The Kennedy health plan's $68 billion price tag makes it out of the question, Danforth said, because it might fuel inflation or retard economic recovery.

Instead, he proposed a tax credit which would be refundable if the tax due the government were less than the value of the credit.

"With the maximun credit of $200, for example, the tax savings would actually be $200, and the amount of the credit for any taxpayer would be determined on a sliding scale so that only lower and middle-income taxpayers could claim full value," the paper said.

Danforth said an unlimited tax credit would cost about $17 billion, but that amount could be sharply reduced by limiting the maximum credit available and scaling it down as income increases.

If the credit were designed to be a percentage of health insurance premiums it would discourage "overbuying and overconsumption of health services."

It would leave health care decisions in the hands of individuals and could be administered through the Internal Revenue Service without requiring more bureaucracy, Danforth said.

A panel of outside scientists had recommended the action on the basis of its three-year study of the 35,000 to 50,000 cough and cold remedies sold without prescription.

The panel also said:

—No non-prescription cough or cold drug should contain more than three active ingredients, and each of them must be from a different group such as cough suppressant, nasal decongestant and antihistamines.

—The FDA should require labels on non-prescription cough-and-cold remedies to be more specific, emphasize that the products give only temporary relief from symptoms rather than cure the ailments, carry warnings if aspirin is present, and advise patients to see a doctor if the problem persists.

—There is no scientific justification for the claim that vitamin C prevents or cures a common cold. The report recommended against approving it for that purpose until controlled clinical studies prove it is effective.

The FDA decided to allow the sale of the 10 strong drugs immediately. The panel's other recommendations were being reviewed by FDA officials, although Sherwin Gardner, acting FDA commissioner, indicated that he agreed that over-the-counter drugs should have more detailed labels.

The advisory panel had recommended removing 14 cough-and-cold drugs from the prescription list, but the FDA said it disagreed on three of the drugs and was deferring a decision on another.

The drugs that now can be marketed without prescription are products containing the antihistamines brompheniramine and chlorpheniramine, the bronchodilators methoxyphenamine and theophylline in three forms, and the nasal decongestants oxymetazone, xylometacoline and pseudoephedrine in two forms.

Danforth attacks Kennedy health insurance program

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Refundable tax credits for the purchase of private health insurance are more practical than comprehensive national health insurance, Republican U.S. Senate candidate John C. Danforth said Tuesday.

The Kennedy health plan's $68 billion price tag makes it out of the question, Danforth said, because it might fuel inflation or retard economic recovery.

Instead, he proposed a tax credit which would be refundable if the tax due the government were less than the value of the credit.

"With the maximun credit of $200, for example, the tax savings would actually be $200, and the amount of the credit for any taxpayer would be determined on a sliding scale so that only lower and middle-income taxpayers could claim full value," the paper said.

Danforth said an unlimited tax credit would cost about $17 billion, but that amount could be sharply reduced by limiting the maximum credit available and scaling it down as income increases.

If the credit were designed to be a percentage of health insurance premiums it would discourage "overbuying and overconsumption of health services."

It would leave health care decisions in the hands of individuals and could be administered through the Internal Revenue Service without requiring more bureaucracy, Danforth said.

Arts and Crafts Festival this weekend

NEW MADRID — The second annual arts and crafts festival, sponsored by New Madrid Community Betterment, is scheduled on Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and on Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m.

The two-day festival will take place in the City Park at Crisler and Davis Streets. In case of rain, the festival will be held in the Scott Street Elementary School.

The two-day affair has gained wide interest throughout the Bootheel area and promises to have outstanding exhibits and displays from many craftsmen and hobbyists.

Exhibitors have registered from the towns of Caruthersville, Poplar Bluff, Jackson, Chaffee, Malden, Portageville, Matthews, Lilbourn, Sikeston, Charleston, Daisy, and Parma in addition to at least eight from New Madrid.

Charles Palmer is one of many local entries in the Arts and Crafts Festival. He is shown working on a doll's cradle, and has made decorative shelves, mirrors and plant stands. he will offer wood craft items for sale at his booth at the festival.

Embroidery talents keep New Madrid High School junior Cindy Sharp busy, and she will display much of her work at the festival, which is sponsored by the New Madrid Community Betterment. Miss Sharp plans to take special request orders for designs at the festival, and will embroider on items provided by the owner.

Mrs. Mary Henry, 83, holds a Bicentennial flag which she crocheted. The flag will be displayed at the New Madrid Historical Museum prior to the festival. Among items Mrs. Henry will enter for sale at the craft show are pot holders, key chains, a quilt and aprons.

HELEN JOSEPH'S CHEESE BREAD

It slices and toasts beautifully.

2 cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon caraway seed
2 large eggs
1 cup sour cream

Stir together the flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt; stir in cheese and caraway. Beat eggs until thick and ivory color; beat in sour cream. Add flour-cheese mixture; stir until moistened but still lumpy. Turn into an 8½ by 4½ by 3½-inch loaf pan that has been lined with wax paper and the paper buttered. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — 40 minutes. Turn out on wire rack; remove paper; turn right side up; cool completely.

Corn chowder

A good New Jersey cook makes a soup her husband favors.

3 medium potatoes, pared and diced
1 medium onion, finely chopped
1 cup water
¼ cup butter or margarine
16-ounce can cream-style corn
7 or 8½-ounce can whole-kernel corn, undrained
3 cups milk
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

Bring the potatoes, onion, water and butter to a boil; simmer, covered, until potatoes are tender — about 10 minutes. Add cream-style and whole-kernel corn and milk; simmer (do not boil) for 10 to 15 minutes. Stir in salt and pepper. Makes 6 servings.

Mrs. Bond dedicates mansion library

By Marian McDowell
Missouri press news

JEFFERSON CITY — The first-floor library in the Missouri Executive Mansion, restored to its original 1871 condition, was dedicated in a ceremony last week by Carolyn Bond, wife of the governor.

The ceremony marked the 155th anniversary of Missouri statehood.

The library is the first room on the mansion's main floor to be restored under a comprehensive program drafted by Theodore J. Wofford, a St. Louis architect.

Restoration costs thus far total about $60,000, but some bills have not been submitted.

Structural work for the library was financed by the General Assembly in the capitol improvements budget; furniture and accessories were donated or purchased by Missouri Mansion Preservation, Inc., (MMPI), a nonprofit corporation dedicated to restoring the mansion's interior which was founded in 1974 by Mrs. Bond.

Mrs. Bond described the library restoration as a joint venture of the state and MMPI. "Approximately $31,000 has come from tax dollars, and MMPI has spent $30,000 for furniture and art," Mrs. Bond said.

MMPI has raised $140,000 through its patron drive, donations and benefit bus tours.

The 106 patrons who have assisted the state with restoration of the 105-year-old Executive Mansion were honored at a dedication-night dinner by Governor and Mrs. Bond.

On the 14 bus tours MMPI sponsored this year to the Executive Mansion, about 700 persons toured the mansion and had lunch with Mrs. Bond. Bus tour profits total $9,500.

The library was restored to its original color scheme of deep green and gold and Renaissance era style. The heavy classic molding of the ceiling and cornices is accented in green and gold, with stencil work displayed on the ceiling.

The parquet floor has been covered with a green and gold Wilton rug custom loomed and purchased by MMPI. It was made in England from an 1870 geometrical pattern, and is designed to be removed for large scale functions.

Mrs. Bond also unveiled an antique over-the-mantel mirror in a gold-leaf frame, the official gift to the mansion from the Bonds. Each governor traditionally presents a gift for the mansion during his term of office.

Antique furnishings added to the library include a mantel clock set, an 1870 library table and bookcase, an 1840 empire sofa and five Renaissance chairs.

Plans to install a central heating and air conditioning system and a fire protection system are expected to cost the state about $400,000 in the next year.

Child abuse program will be presented

To promote understanding of the problem of child abuse, the Tri-County Mental Health Association is sponsoring a program to be conducted by the state child abuse team.

The meeting has been set for 7:30 p.m. Monday at the First Christian Church in Sikeston. The public is urged to attend.

The professionals on the state child abuse team are Dennis Catalano, physician from Cardinal Glennon Hospital in St. Louis; attorney Jesse Coulter of Columbia; child abuse coordinator Diane Carter of St. Louis; Richard Sewell, a police juvenile officer from Mexico; Shirley Phillips of the Department of Family Services of Springfield; and Dora Cole, teacher and outreach worker for Wayne County.

The program is free and anyone having questions can contact Liz Ferrell at 471-0800.

Ann Landers

Price of beauty too high for her

Dear Ann Landers: In regard to your advice to "I'm OK," may I say "BULLFEATHERS!" According to Ann Landers, no one has to go through life with imperfect features unless he wants to.

Why don't you wake up, Dummy? Not everyone can afford the price of beauty. Sure, I'd love to have a gorgeous nose instead of the blob God gave me, but I can't just pop into a plastic surgeon's office, look at some pictures and say, "I'll take this one."

I checked into the price of a nose job last year. It was $400. I haven't got that kind of money to put in my nose, and neither have billions of other people, so I'm -- Settling For The Blob

Dear S.F.T.B.: If you wanted a new nose badly enough you wouldn't be settling for the blob. Too many folks say "can't" when the word is "won't." Millions of people have made their "impossible" dreams come true. You can, too.

Dear Ann Landers: I wish I could tell my story to "Worried in Houston," age 15, who must decide whether to live with her mother or father.

When I was 13, my parents gave me the same choice. I loved them both equally and couldn't choose. Every time anyone asked me to decide, I began to cry. Then this wonderful judge took me into his office. I knew the awful question would come again -- "Mother or father?"

Well, it didn't. Instead he asked if I'd like him to make the decision. I answered, "Yes." He said, "I must know more about you. Would you be willing to talk to a girl who works with me and tell her about yourself?" I said OK.

On three separate visits we talked about school, my friends and what I wanted to be when I grow up. Then she spoke to the judge. He decided I should live with my mother, but I could visit my father whenever I wanted to. The judge gave me his address and phone number and he made me promise to call or write on my 14th birthday (five months away) and tell him how things were going.

I now know it was my parents' idea to let the judge decide, but it was the judge's idea to keep in touch with me.

Now I have two homes and four parents. They all came to my graduation (junior high) and sat together. I hope "Worried In Houston" has parents and a judge who care about HER the way mine did. -- Lucky In Boston

Dear Lucky: So do I. Your letter may do more good than you'll ever know. Thanks for sharing.

Dear Ann: The bride (my niece) admits she will be five months pregnant when the wedding takes place in October. To look at her you'd swear she is six months gone right now.

Her parents are aware of the situation but still they want to give her a fancy church wedding. They must be blind. What kind of gown could the bride possibly wear to conceal her condition? -- D.D.D.

Dear D.: That's HER problem.

Dear Ann: I just read the letter from the lady who complained because her husband always introduced her as "THE wife" instead of "MY wife." Some people don't know when they're well off. My husband never introduces me at all, just lets me stand there like a cigar-store Indian. Print this, please. He reads you daily. -- Mrs. Invisible.

Dear Mrs.: Here it is. Let me know if it helped.

What are the do's and don'ts of teaching your child about the birds and the bees? Let Ann Landers's new booklet, "How, What, and When To Tell Your Child About Sex," give you the ground rules. For your copy send 50 cents in coin, along with a long, stamped, self- addressed envelope, to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Mrs. Bond dedicates mansion library

By Marian McDowell
Missouri press news

JEFFERSON CITY — The first-floor library in the Missouri Executive Mansion, restored to its original 1871 condition, was dedicated in a ceremony last week by Carolyn Bond, wife of the governor.

The ceremony marked the 155th anniversary of Missouri statehood.

The library is the first room on the mansion's main floor to be restored under a comprehensive program drafted by Theodore J. Wofford, a St. Louis architect.

Restoration costs thus far total about $60,000, but some bills have not been submitted.

Structural work for the library was financed by the General Assembly in the capitol improvements budget; furniture and accessories were donated or purchased by Missouri Mansion Preservation, Inc., (MMPI), a nonprofit corporation dedicated to restoring the mansion's interior which was founded in 1974 by Mrs. Bond.

Mrs. Bond described the library restoration as a joint venture of the state and MMPI. "Approximately $31,000 has come from tax dollars, and MMPI has spent $30,000 for furniture and art," Mrs. Bond said.

MMPI has raised $140,000 through its patron drive, donations and benefit bus tours.

The 106 patrons who have assisted the state with restoration of the 105-year-old Executive Mansion were honored at a dedication-night dinner by Governor and Mrs. Bond.

On the 14 bus tours MMPI sponsored this year to the Executive Mansion, about 700 persons toured the mansion and had lunch with Mrs. Bond. Bus tour profits total $9,500.

The library was restored to its original color scheme of deep green and gold and Renaissance era style. The heavy classic molding of the ceiling and cornices is accented in green and gold, with stencil work displayed on the ceiling.

The parquet floor has been covered with a green and gold Wilton rug custom loomed and purchased by MMPI. It was made in England from an 1870 geometrical pattern, and is designed to be removed for large scale functions.

Mrs. Bond also unveiled an antique over-the-mantel mirror in a gold-leaf frame, the official gift to the mansion from the Bonds. Each governor traditionally presents a gift for the mansion during his term of office.

Antique furnishings added to the library include a mantel clock set, an 1870 library table and bookcase, an 1840 empire sofa and five Renaissance chairs.

Plans to install a central heating and air conditioning system and a fire protection system are expected to cost the state about $400,000 in the next year.

Child abuse program will be presented

To promote understanding of the problem of child abuse, the Tri-County Mental Health Association is sponsoring a program to be conducted by the state child abuse team.

The meeting has been set for 7:30 p.m. Monday at the First Christian Church in Sikeston. The public is urged to attend.

The professionals on the state child abuse team are Dennis Catalano, physician from Cardinal Glennon Hospital in St. Louis; attorney Jesse Coulter of Columbia; child abuse coordinator Diane Carter of St. Louis; Richard Sewell, a police juvenile officer from Mexico; Shirley Phillips of the Department of Family Services of Springfield; and Dora Cole, teacher and outreach worker for Wayne County.

The program is free and anyone having questions can contact Liz Ferrell at 471-0800.

Ann Landers

Price of beauty too high for her

Dear Ann Landers: In regard to your advice to "I'm OK," may I say "BULLFEATHERS!" According to Ann Landers, no one has to go through life with imperfect features unless he wants to.

Why don't you wake up, Dummy? Not everyone can afford the price of beauty. Sure, I'd love to have a gorgeous nose instead of the blob God gave me, but I can't just pop into a plastic surgeon's office, look at some pictures and say, "I'll take this one."

I checked into the price of a nose job last year. It was $400. I haven't got that kind of money to put in my nose, and neither have billions of other people, so I'm — Settling For The Blob

Dear S.F.T.B.: If you wanted a new nose badly enough you wouldn't be settling for the blob. Too many folks say "can't" when the word is "won't." Millions of people have made their "impossible" dreams come true. You can, too.

Dear Ann Landers: I wish I could tell my story to "Worried in Houston," age 15, who must decide whether to live with her mother or father.

When I was 13, my parents gave me the same choice. I loved them both equally and couldn't choose. Every time anyone asked me to decide, I began to cry. Then this wonderful judge took me into his office. I knew the awful question would come again — "Mother or father?"

Well, it didn't. Instead he asked if I'd like him to make the decision. I answered, "Yes." He said, "I must know more about you. Would you be willing to talk to a girl who works with me and tell her about yourself?" I said OK.

On three separate visits we talked about school, my friends and what I wanted to be when I grow up. Then she spoke to the judge. He decided I should live with my mother, but I could visit my father whenever I wanted to. The judge gave me his address and phone number and he made me promise to call or write on my 14th birthday (five months away) and tell him how things were going.

I now know it was my parents' idea to let the judge decide, but it was the judge's idea to keep in touch with me.

Now I have two homes and four parents. They all came to my graduation (junior high) and sat together. I hope "Worried In Houston" has parents and a judge who care about HER the way mine did. — Lucky In Boston

Dear Lucky: So do I. Your letter may do more good than you'll ever know. Thanks for sharing.

Dear Ann: The bride (my niece) admits she will be five months pregnant when the wedding takes place in October. To look at her you'd swear she is six months gone right now.

Her parents are aware of the situation but still they want to give her a fancy church wedding. They must be blind. What kind of gown could the bride possibly wear to conceal her condition? — D.D.D..

Dear D.: That's HER problem.

Dear Ann: I just read the letter from the lady who complained because her husband always introduced her as "THE wife" instead of "MY wife." Some people don't know when they're well off. My husband never introduces me at all, just lets me stand there like a cigar-store Indian. Print this, please. He reads you daily. — Mrs. Invisible.

Dear Mrs.: Here it is. Let me know if it helped.

What are the do's and don'ts of teaching your child about the birds and the bees? Let Ann Landers's new booklet, "How, What, and When To Tell Your Child About Sex," give you the ground rules. For your copy send 50 cents in coin, along with a long, stamped, self- addressed envelope, to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Dr. Lamb

Delays removal of plantar warts

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Could you please give me some information on plantar warts. I have had one for about one-and-a-half years. Now I notice I'm getting others. I went to a podiatrist about eight months ago but at the time I was severely anemic so he didn't want to begin treatment. He told me no matter what I do I shouldn't have them cut out because the scar formation can be more painful than the wart. Others have told me the only real way to cure them is to have them cut out. What do you advise?

DEAR READER — The podiatrist gave you good advice. Plantar warts are different than other warts and the treatment is not the same.

Warts, regardless of location, are caused by a virus. They are mildly contagious. They seem to have a life cycle and will disappear on their own time. Unfortunately, a wart may last five years, but many disappear within a year. Although there may be several warts they may all disappear about the same time, suggesting that the body has finally developed an immunity to them and literally expels them.

One of the problems about removing a wart is that a new one may then develop. It is not a regrowth of the old one if it has been completely removed, but a new wart. It is advisable to remove most warts because the presence of one may lead to a spread with new wart formations.

The plantar warts are caused by the same virus, but the location, in the dense tough tissues on the bottom of the foot, makes the usual means of destruction unsatisfactory because you may be left with a painful scar. It is better to live with a painful wart for as much as five years than to live the rest of your life with a painful scar on the bottom of your foot.

Liquid nitrogen to freeze out warts, electrocautery to burn them out, and other treatments are used to destroy warts in other locations.

A good method is to apply a small piece of 40 per cent salicylic acid plaster the size of the wart. The plaster is held in place by a piece of waterproof tape and then replaced every three days. The wart tissue will turn white and can be pared away each week. This will keep the size of the wart down and eliminate some of the discomfort. In some cases it will eventually cure the wart. Applications of cold cream containing five per cent formalin can also be used in some cases.

Some patients develop a sensitivity to formalin and if there is any sign of a rash the treatment should be stopped.

For other warts, removal by liquid nitrogen is usually successful. All of the methods to destroy warts must be done under a physician's supervision. A strong medicine called cantharidin can be applied to a wart and the area covered with collodion and properly dressed. Regardless of the method, the successful ones depend on destroying the wart-infected tissue.

Some folk medicine cures seem to work on occasions. Usually this is a happy coincidence with the treatment being applied just at the time the wart was all through anyway.

Those who want information on dangers of using sprays can send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents for The Health Letter number 3-4, Aerosol Dangers. Address your letter to Dr. Lamb in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019

Japanese men hire Nebraska woman as a governess in new series

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It seems far-fetched that ABC's new "Mr. T. and Tina" comedy series concerns a widowed Japanese man who moves to Chicago and hires a wacky young Nebraska lady as governess for his two kids.

But the fetch gets even farther, at least initially, when executive producer Jimmie Komack says the show evolved from what became "Chico and the Man," the NBC sitcom about an old Anglo and a young Chicano.

"It's relatively simple," insisted Komack, a fast-talking former standup comedian, as he sat down to explain it. "When I originally wanted to do 'Chico,' I came to what I considered a terrific truth."

He said he'd been chatting with some friends, one a Mexican-American and another a Japanese-American. It struck him odd that another guy at the pow-wow jokingly referred to Komack as "the American."

"Like my people are from Russia, Hungary, I'm Jewish, right? This other guy's a Chicano, got a big right to this land, and the other guy's a Nisei, has Japanese parents, but was born here," he said.

"So I say, 'That's funny, these kids were born in America and yet they aren't considered Americans by other Americans. That's really weird.' So I tried to do a show called 'We Truck.'"

He described it as a comedy about a Nisei and a Chicano who run a California trucking company.

"The big joke in the show was always going to be that nobody would accept these Americans as Americans," he said. "They'd get told, 'Talk to me in your language.' They'd say, 'This (English) is my language.' Somebody says, 'Why don't you go home?' They'd say, 'This is my home.'

"But I couldn't sell it. They (the networks) didn't understand it, didn't know where the comedy would come from. So I eliminated the Nisei part and just went with what became 'Chico and the Man.'

"But I still had this commitment to myself for the Nisei side."

However, that side of the idea was changed, he said, because he later felt it posed a big problem.

DAEOC offers classes

The classes will last 26 weeks and will provide training and instruction for adults who have not completed high school to enable them to pass the GED test upon completion of the course, thereby obtaining a Missouri high school equivalency certificate from the State Department of Education.

The course is free for persons who meet the required guidelines.

If interested in enrolling at either location, contact the Bell City Area Opportunity Center, Box 151, Bell City, Mo., or call telephone number 733-4565 for details.

Bell City Head Start to enroll Sept. 9-10

BELL CITY — The Bell City Head Start Center will enroll 3 and 5-year-old children from 9 a.m. to Noon and 1:00-1:30 p.m. Thursday and Friday. Handicapped children of the same age will be accepted.

Parents are requested to bring birth certificates and immunization records.

THE CONDOMINIUM: A Guide for the Alert Buyer

By Dorothy Tymon (Avon 30023. $1.75. Non-Fiction.)

THE CONDOMINIUM: A Guide for the Alert Buyer is a sourcebook of information and expert advice on the biggest housing boom of the decade. For millions of Americans, condominiums represent an ideal living arrangement that provides property ownership, financial equity, lucrative tax advantages, investment opportunity, and security. THE CONDOMINIUM answers important questions concerning every aspect of purchasing a condominium, and offers practical ways to:

. Rate a prospectus
. Negotiate a contract
. Choose a location
. Use tax rates to best advantage
. Foresee hidden charges
. Evaluate construction
. Re-sell a condominium without getting stung

Dorothy Tymon has been in the real estate business since the age of nineteen. She is the author of a previous book, America is For Sale, and is a professor of Real Estate at Hofstra University. Ms. Tymon, a licensed Real Estate Broker and a contributor to many major periodicals, resides in New York City.

What's the law?

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

The way Herman used foul language, he could have been a chicken. He used it once too often, however, in the dining room of his fancy country club. Complaints were registered and his membership was suspended by the club's Grievance Committee.

A Man without a Country Club, Herman became desolate and demanded his reinstatement in court.

"My membership was a valuable property right and it couldn't be taken away from me just because of a little language," he complained to a judge. "Other members used bad language, too."

"Maybe so," responded a member of the Grievance Committee, "but not as bad as Herman's language. The words Herman used were far too salty--particularly in a dining room. Sounding more like a First Mate, he embarrassed everyone else's mate."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you consider Herman's suspension arbitrary and order his reinstatement despite his salty slanguage?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that while Herman's membership was a valuable property right, the memberships of other club members were also valuable property rights and warranted protection. Because Herman's profanity was so extreme, concluded the judge, in effect, his suspension could not be deemed arbitrary, capricious or an abuse of discretion.

He earned a master's degree in human relations and government from Webster College in St. Louis.

Achieves 4.0

SPRINGFIELD — Kathleen Frazier of Sikeston made all A's for a semester grade point average of 4.0 during the recently completed summer term at Southwest Missouri State University, Don Payton, director of information services, has announced.

Bell is symbol of mental health

JEFFERSON CITY — "This bell shall ring out hope for the mentally ill and victory over mental illness." These words are inscribed on the Mental Health Bell, the symbol of the Mental Health Association.

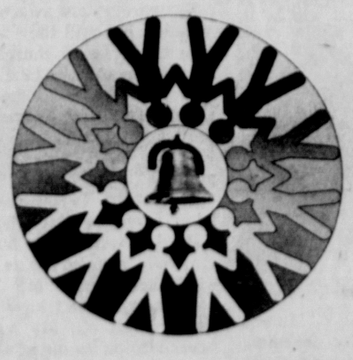

This month, a neighbor will be ringing your doorbell to ask you to support mental health.

The Mental Health Association logo, used in conjunction with the slogan, "Citizens Who Do Make A Difference" stresses strength through unity, while making full allowance for individual differences. The logo depicts a group of people standing with hands joined, forming an unbroken circle. In the center is the Mental Health Bell.

The changing shades of people, overlayed on the changing shades of the world in which they live, suggests the power of different individuals united to change conditions. The unbroken circle of people suggests togetherness and unity of organization. The circle of people with heads concentrating together through an organization trying to find solutions to problems.

That mental health is a full-time, year around activity is suggested by the fact that 12 people form the circle.

The people of Missouri can "make a difference" by contributing generously to the Mental Health Association during September, says Deems Brooks of Warrensburg, state president of the association.

Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Could you please give me some information on plantar warts. I have had one for about one-and-a-half years. Now I notice I'm getting others. I went to a podiatrist about eight months ago but at the time I was severely anemic so he didn't want to begin treatment. He told me no matter what I do I shouldn't have them cut out because the scar formation can be more painful than the wart. Others have told me the only real way to cure them is to have them cut out. What do you advise?

DEAR READER — The podiatrist gave you good advice. Plantar warts are different than other warts and the treatment is not the same.

Warts, regardless of location, are caused by a virus. They are mildly contagious. They seem to have a life cycle and will disappear on their own time. Unfortunately, a wart may last five years, but many disappear within a year. Although there may be several warts they may all disappear about the same time, suggesting that the body has finally developed an immunity to them and literally expels them.

One of the problems about removing a wart is that a new one may then develop. It is not a regrowth of the old one if it has been completely removed, but a new wart. It is advisable to remove most warts because the presence of one may lead to a spread with new wart formations.

The plantar warts are caused by the same virus, but the location, in the dense tough tissues on the bottom of the foot, makes the usual means of destruction unsatisfactory because you may be left with a painful scar. It is better to live with a painful wart for as much as five years than to live the rest of your life with a painful scar on the bottom of your foot.

Liquid nitrogen to freeze out warts, electrocautery to burn them out, and other treatments are used to destroy warts in other locations.

A good method is to apply a small piece of 40 per cent salicylic acid plaster the size of the wart. The plaster is held in place by a piece of waterproof tape and then replaced every three days. The wart tissue will turn white and can be pared away each week. This will keep the size of the wart down and eliminate some of the discomfort. In some cases it will eventually cure the wart. Applications of cold cream containing five per cent formalin can also be used in some cases.

Some patients develop a sensitivity to formalin and if there is any sign of a rash the treatment should be stopped.

For other warts, removal by liquid nitrogen is usually successful. All of the methods to destroy warts must be done under a physician's supervision. A strong medicine called cantharidin can be applied to a wart and the area covered with collodion and properly dressed. Regardless of the method, the successful ones depend on destroying the wart-infected tissue.

Some folk medicine cures seem to work on occasions. Usually this is a happy coincidence with the treatment being applied just at the time the wart was all through anyway.

What's the law?

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

The way Herman used foul language, he could have been a chicken. He used it once too often, however, in the dining room of his fancy country club. Complaints were registered and his membership was suspended by the club's Grievance Committee.

A Man without a Country Club, Herman became desolate and demanded his reinstatement in court.

"My membership was a valuable property right and it couldn't be taken away from me just because of a little language," he complained to a judge. "Other members used bad language, too."

"Maybe so," responded a member of the Grievance Committee, "but not as bad as Herman's language. The words Herman used were far too salty--particularly in a dining room. Sounding more like a First Mate, he embarrassed everyone else's mate."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you consider Herman's suspension arbitrary and order his reinstatement despite his salty slanguage?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that while Herman's membership was a valuable property right, the memberships of other club members were also valuable property rights and warranted protection. Because Herman's profanity was so extreme, concluded the judge, in effect, his suspension could not be deemed arbitrary, capricious or an abuse of discretion.

Bell is symbol of mental health

JEFFERSON CITY — "This bell shall ring out hope for the mentally ill and victory over mental illness." These words are inscribed on the Mental Health Bell, the symbol of the Mental Health Association.

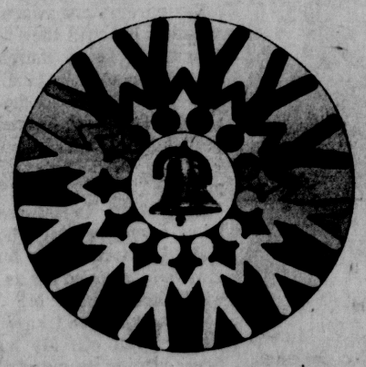

This month, a neighbor will be ringing your doorbell to ask you to support mental health.

The Mental Health Association logo, used in conjunction with the slogan, "Citizens Who Do Make A Difference" stresses strength through unity, while making full allowance for individual differences. The logo depicts a group of people standing with hands joined, forming an unbroken circle. In the center is the Mental Health Bell.

The changing shades of people, overlayed on the changing shades of the world in which they live, suggests the power of different individuals united to change conditions. The unbroken circle of people suggests togetherness and unity of organization. The circle of people with heads concentrating together through an organization trying to find solutions to problems.

That mental health is a full-time, year around activity is suggested by the fact that 12 people form the circle.

The people of Missouri can "make a difference" by contributing generously to the Mental Health Association during September, says Deems Brooks of Warrensburg, state president of the association.

Japanese men hire Nebraska woman as a governess in new series

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It seems far-fetched that ABC's new "Mr. T. and Tina" comedy series concerns a widowed Japanese man who moves to Chicago and hires a wacky young Nebraska lady as governess for his two kids.

But the fetch gets even farther, at least initially, when executive producer Jimmie Komack says the show evolved from what became "Chico and the Man," the NBC sitcom about an old Anglo and a young Chicano.

"It's relatively simple," insisted Komack, a fast-talking former standup comedian, as he sat down to explain it. "When I originally wanted to do 'Chico,' I came to what I considered a terrific truth."

He said he'd been chatting with some friends, one a Mexican-American and another a Japanese-American. It struck him odd that another guy at the pow-wow jokingly referred to Komack as "the American."

"Like my people are from Russia, Hungary, I'm Jewish, right? This other guy's a Chicano, got a big right to this land, and the other guy's a Nisei, has Japanese parents, but was born here," he said.

"So I say, 'That's funny, these kids were born in America and yet they aren't considered Americans by other Americans. That's really weird.' So I tried to do a show called 'We Truck.'"

He described it as a comedy about a Nisei and a Chicano who run a California trucking company.

"The big joke in the show was always going to be that nobody would accept these Americans as Americans," he said. "They'd get told, 'Talk to me in your language.' They'd say, 'This (English) is my language.' Somebody says, 'Why don't you go home?' They'd say, 'This is my home.'

"But I couldn't sell it.' They (the networks) didn't understand it, didn't know where the comedy would come from. So I eliminated the Nisei part and just went with what became 'Chico and the Man.'

"But I still had this commitment to myself for the Nisei side."

However, that side of the idea was changed, he said, because he later felt it posed a big problem.

DAEOC offers classes

The classes will last 26 weeks and will provide training and instruction for adults who have not completed high school to enable them to pass the GED test upon completion of the course, thereby obtaining a Missouri high school equivalency certificate from the State Department of Education.

The course is free for persons who meet the required guidelines.

If interested in enrolling at either location, contact the Bell City Area Opportunity Center, Box 151, Bell City, Mo., or call telephone number 733-4565 for details.

Bell City Head Start to enroll Sept. 9-10

BELL CITY — The Bell City Head Start Center will enroll 3 and 5-year-old children from 9 a.m. to Noon and 1:00-1:30 p.m. Thursday and Friday. Handicapped children of the same age will be accepted.

Parents are requested to bring birth certificates and immunization records.

By Dorothy Tymon (Avon 30023. $1.75. Non-Fiction.)

THE CONDOMINIUM: A Guide for the Alert Buyer is a sourcebook of information and expert advice on the biggest housing boom of the decade. For millions of Americans, condominiums represent an ideal living arrangement that provides property ownership, financial equity, lucrative tax advantages, investment opportunity, and security. THE CONDOMINIUM answers important questions concerning every aspect of purchasing a condominium, and offers practical ways to:

. Rate a prospectus
. Negotiate a contract
. Choose a location
. Use tax rates to best advantage
. Foresee hidden charges
. Evaluate construction
. Re-sell a condominium without getting stung

Dorothy Tymon has been in the real estate business since the age of nineteen. She is the author of a previous book, America is For Sale, and is a professor of Real Estate at Hofstra University. Ms. Tymon, a licensed Real Estate Broker and a contributor to many major periodicals, resides in New York City.

Jobs bill meets key opposition

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters of the Humphrey-Hawkins jobs bill, a major plank in the Democratic party platform, now are pushing a watered-down version of the measure because the original proposal met key opposition.

Rep. Augustus F. Hawkins, D-Calif., with Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., the sponsor of the bill, is trying to get the House Education and Labor Committee to approve the revised measure today. The backers then face the problem of getting it on the floor and sent to the Senate and approved there before Congress adjourns for the year on Oct. 2.

The committee passed an earlier version in May. However, that bill was blocked by the House leadership from coming to the House floor after the measure attracted a lot of political lightning.

The Republican National Convention used the bill as a prime example of what the GOP considered the tendency of congressional Democrats to spend huge amounts of tax money and to expand government. And 60 of the 81 Democratic freshmen asked the House leadership not to bring up the costly bill because it might hurt their re-election chances.

Under the bill, the president, Congress and the Federal Reserve would take various steps aimed at stimulating private industry to produce new jobs. To further close the unemployment gap, there would be public service jobs to employ those unable to find work elsewhere.

The Ford administration claims the bill would cost $30 billion annually. Others estimate the cost from $8 billion to $16 billion.

It also has been criticized by some supporters of Democratic presidential nomineee Jimmy Carter, and some liberal economists have said it might be inflationary.

Since the early summer, Hawkins, organized labor and civil rights oranizations have regrouped to revise the bill. That revision is up for committee approval. An aide to Hawkins said the revisions have been endorsed by Carter campaign aides and are being promoted with vigor by the AFL-CIO and other groups.

These are the key changes:

—The goal of getting unemployment down to 3 per cent within four years would be for adults only. The original 3 per cent goal was to include persons between the age of 16 and 20 as well as adults. By comparison, the August unemployment rate was 7.9 per cent.

—An anti-inflationary section was inserted to set the goal of keeping the annual rate of consumer prices at the level they are at the time the bill is enacted into law.

—Providing government jobs to persons who can't find other work — the so-called "last-resort" jobs — would be delayed until two years after the bill takes effect.

CIRCUIT COURT

NEW MADRID — Sentences were imposed Tuesday—the opening day of the September term of the New Madrid County Circuit Court—against five persons who pleaded guilty to criminal charges before Judge William L. Ragland.

Stella Lee Resonno, exhibiting a dangerous and deadly weapon in a rude and threatening manner (reduced from felonious assault), was placed on probation after receiving a one-year jail sentence which was suspended upon payment of a $50 fine plus court costs. She was accused of felonious assault on July 12 by firing a pistol from her porch, reportedly toward her son, and the bullet struck Diane Perkins who was walking down the road.

Franklin Ealy, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., was granted probation without supervision after being sentenced to two years in custody of the Department of Corrections following a guilty plea to a statutory rape charge. Ealy had been charged with rape and carnal knowledge of a 16-year-old New Madrid girl on July 5.

Harold Tidwell, Lilbourn, buying and receiving stolen property—an electric drill and sander—he allegedly knew had been stolen, was placed on probation under supervision after being sentenced to a two-year term in custody of the Department of Corrections.

Charles Walker, Fort Wayne, Ind., exhibiting a dangerous and deadly weapon—a pistol—in a threatening manner before Joe Edward Alexander on May 26, fined $100 and given a one-year jail sentence which was suspended upon payment of fine and costs and during good behavior.

Jimmy Robertson, Malden, driving while intoxicated—third offense, was granted probation without supervision after receiving a two-year sentence.

SCARC hears about working with retarded

DEXTER — Members of the Stoddard County Association for Retarded Citizens heard a talk about work with mentally retarded girls and amended the organization's constitution at a meeting Thursday night.

She was chosen to work with the girls through a Girl Scout program, and was one of a grup of Girl Scouts who helped set up a day camp for mentally retarded girls.

The amendment to the constitution states that if an executive board member misses more than three consecutive board meetings, he may be removed from the board and a new member appointed.

It was also reported that a request for a grant for a day activity center will be submitted to the state later this month.

Principals to meet Sept. 15 at SeMo State

CAPE GIRARDEAU — About 125 southeast Missouri high school principals, supervisors and directors of secondary education are expected to attend the 11th fall meeting Sept. 15 of the Southeast Missouri Secondary School Principals Association.

The group will hear addresses by Dr. Robert G. Woods, dean of the College of Education at the University of Missouri, and Dr. William J. Petrek, the new vice president for academic services at Southeast Missouri State University.

The conference will be held in the Missourian and Indian Rooms of the University Center at Southeast Missouri State University with registration beginning at 9 a.m.

Dr. Bill Stacy, dean of the School of Graduate Studies at Southeast Missouri State, will welcome the visitors to the campus at 10.

Following a business meeting, Woods will speak at 10:30 on curriculum trends in the secondary school. After a noon luncheon, Petrek will talk on the role of Southeast Missouri State University in regard to the schools of the service area.

Adjournment is scheduled no later than 2 p.m.

President of the Southeast Missouri Secondary School Principals Association is Lanny W. barnes, principal of Central Junior High School in Cape Girardeau. Vice president is Otha L. Kyles, administrative assistant in the Hayti R-2 School District. Secretary- treasurer is Lloyd C. Whitledge, principal of Russell Hawkins Junior High School in Jackson.

Dr. Willard J. Morgan, dean of continuing education at Southeast Missouri State, serves as the university's advisor to the organization.

Armed forces

Brian Banks

SAN ANTONIO — Airman Brian K. Banks, son of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Banks of East Prairie, Mo., has graduated from Air Force basic training at Lackland Air Force Base.

The airman is remaining at Lackland for specialized training in the security police field.

Seamen in the 18th century were called "tars" because they wore their long hair in tarred pigtails to keep it in place. Large square collars were added to sailors' uniforms to keep the tar from staining their open-necked sweaters.

Tiger sharks, prowling shallow reef mouths and harbors, are often scavengers, according to the National Geographic Society. They are known to eat sea birds, garbage, tin cans, lumps of coal and, in one instance, a 30-foot roll of yard wide roofing paper.

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Beatle George Harrison was not aware of it, but he infringed on a copyright when he wrote the melody for "My Sweet Lord" in 1970, a federal judge says.

U.S. District Court Judge Richard Owen, a composer himself, convicted Harrison of copyright infringement Tuesday. Although Harrison did not deliberately plagiarize the melody of "He's So Fine," he did essentially use the work, the judge said.

"His subconsciousness knew that song had worked out but his conscious mind did not remember," Owen said. "This then under the law is infringement of a copyright..."

Owen scheduled a trial for Nov. 8 on the issue of damages in the lawsuit brought by the Bright Tunes Music Corporation, which owns the copyright to "He's So Fine."

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Commerce Secretary Elliot L. Richardson will receive the 1976 Thomas Hart Benton Award of the Kansas City Art Institute.

The award, named for the late Kansas City artist, was established in 1974 "to be presented annually to a living American whose life and values best exemplify the ideals, concerns and human qualities of the great Thomas Hart Benton."

Richardson was named Tuesday as winner of the 1976 award. John W. Gardner, founder of Common Cause, won the award last year.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A scholarship has been set up in the name of First Lady Betty Ford to help pay the tuition of students in fashion education.

The Washington Fashion Group announced the scholarship Tuesday. Margy Grigg, a director of the group, said the scholarship was named for Mrs. Ford because she "has focused great attention on a great American fashion industry by spotlighting its talented designers through her wearing of American clothes in all price ranges."

AMSTERDAM, The Netherlands (AP) — The Soviet government has officially requested that chess grandmaster Viktor Korchnoi, who has defected from Russia, be barred from the next world championship series, the International Chess Federation says.

However, federation president Max Euwe said Tuesday that nothing can prevent Korchnoi from taking part in championship matches. Korchnoi is a candidate in his own right under federation rules, he said.

Korchnoi is in The Netherlands on a six-month permit while he awaits a decision on his application for political asylum. He did not return to Russia in July after competing in a tournament in Amsterdam.

CHICAGO (AP) — The wife of heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali, Khalilah Ali, has filed for a divorce on grounds of mental cruelty and desertion.

"It is not my desire to be vindictive against my husband. At this point, I want to work further on my own career and to raise our children free of further pain," Mrs. Ali said in a statement.

Mini-courses deal with Middle East

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Two one- credit- hour mini-courses dealing with the Middle East will be offered during the fall semester by the history department of Southeast Missouri State University.

The first of the courses, The Middle East: Islamic, will meet five times for three hours each on Wednesday nights, beginning Sept. 29 and continuing through Oct. 27.

It will be taught by Dr. George Ketcham, dean of the College of Social Sciences. It will cover the rise of Islam as a dominant force in the growth of Middle Eastern states, the golden age of Islamic civilization, the period of decay and Western domination.

The second course, Middle East: 20th Century, will meet six times for three hours each on Wednesday nights from Nov. 3 through Dec. 8. It will be taught by Ketcham and Bob White, assistant professor of history.

Participants will study the growth of Zionism and Arab nationalism, their relationship to the development of Israel, the Middle East conflict and world diplomacy.

Ketcham will concentrate on the Arab states while White will deal mainly with Israel.

Students may enroll in one or both courses. There are no prerequisites.

SCARC hears about working with retarded

DEXTER — Members of the Stoddard County Association for Retarded Citizens heard a talk about work with mentally retarded girls and amended the organization's constitution at a meeting Thursday night.

She was chosen to work with the girls through a Girl Scout program, and was one of a group of Girl Scouts who helped set up a day camp for mentally retarded girls.

The amendment to the constitution states that if an executive board member misses more than three consecutive board meetings, he may be removed from the board and a new member appointed.

It was also reported that a request for a grant for a day activity center will be submitted to the state later this month.

Principals to meet Sept. 15 at SeMo State

CAPE GIRARDEAU — About 125 southeast Missouri high school principals, supervisors and directors of secondary education are expected to attend the 11th fall meeting Sept. 15 of the Southeast Missouri Secondary School Principals Association.

The group will hear addresses by Dr. Robert G. Woods, dean of the College of Education at the University of Missouri, and Dr. William J. Petrek, the new vice president for academic services at Southeast Missouri State University.

The conference will be held in the Missourian and Indian Rooms of the University Center at Southeast Missouri State University with registration beginning at 9 a.m.

Dr. Bill Stacy, dean of the School of Graduate Studies at Southeast Missouri State, will welcome the visitors to the campus at 10.

Following a business meeting, Woods will speak at 10:30 on curriculum trends in the secondary school. After a noon luncheon, Petrek will talk on the role of Southeast Missouri State University in regard to the schools of the service area.

Adjournment is scheduled no later than 2 p.m.

President of the Southeast Missouri Secondary School Principals Association is Lanny W. barnes, principal of Central Junior High School in Cape Girardeau. Vice president is Otha L. Kyles, administrative assistant in the Hayti R-2 School District. Secretary- treasurer is Lloyd C. Whitledge, principal of Russell Hawkins Junior High School in Jackson.

Dr. Willard J. Morgan, dean of continuing education at Southeast Missouri State, serves as the university's advisor to the organization.

Armed forces

Brian Banks

SAN ANTONIO — Airman Brian K. Banks, son of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Banks of East Prairie, Mo., has graduated from Air Force basic training at Lackland Air Force Base.

The airman is remaining at Lackland for specialized training in the security police field.

Seamen in the 18th century were called "tars" because they wore their long hair in tarred pigtails to keep it in place. Large square collars were added to sailors' uniforms to keep the tar from staining their open-necked sweaters.

Tiger sharks, prowling shallow reef mouths and harbors, are often scavengers, according to the National Geographic Society. They are known to eat sea birds, garbage, tin cans, lumps of coal and, in one instance, a 30-foot roll of yard wide roofing paper.

Finley delays suit vs. Kuhn

CHICAGO (AP) — Rollie Fingers, Joe Rudi and Vida Blue will remain with the Oakland A's for the rest of the season and the playoffs, attorneys for A's owner Charles O. Finley and baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn say.

Finley withdrew his request Tuesday for a preliminary order to overturn Kuhn's ruling that he could not sell the three stars to the Boston Red Sox and the New York Yankees.

"Neil, we're very happy, aren't we, about what took place?" Finley asked his lawyer, Neil Papiano of Los Angeles, after the postponement of further action in the case until Nov. 8.

"Yes, we are," Papiano told newsmen. He said Finley will seek a permanent injunction against Kuhn's action at that time plus more than $3.5 million in damages.

An attorney for Kuhn, Peter Bleakley of Washington, said he thought the fact that no preliminary order was issued against the commissioner constituted a victory.

Finley refused further comment except to say: "Kansas City is going to choke and the A's are going to get in the playoffs." He waved away a newsman who persisted in asking questions, saying, "Oh, please don't bother me."

By the time the hearing gets under way, the World Series will be over. Finley had sought to sell Blue to the Yankees for $1.5 million and the other two players to the Red Sox for $1 million each. Kuhn nullified the transaction, saying it was bad for baseball.

If the A's manage to overtake Kansas City and get into the playoffs, they will have the three stars at their disposal and a possible shot at the World Series. But all three are unsigned and, if they remain so at the end of the season, become free agents.

"The issue isn't the World Series," Papiano said. "The issue is the free agent draft, which comes in November. We hope for some rulings around that time."

Named as defendants in the suit are Kuhn, the Yankees and the Red Sox.

As originally filed June 25, the suit charged that Kuhn:

—Violated Finley's rights to due process and equal treatment under the U.S. Constitution by stopping the sale.

Jim McMurry, the top contender for the American Hot Rod Association Driver of the Year award, will be at the J.C. Penney Auto Center with his car, a 1973 AAF-C Funny Car, Saturday, September 18. Jim's car features a Keith Black hemi engine that generates 1800 horsepower with 440 cubic inches. McMurry, a 13-year veteran, recently finished fifth at the funny car nationals August 21. The 1973 Vega is capable of finishing the quarter mile at 223 m.p.h. in 6.61 seconds.

Finley delays suit vs. Kuhn

CHICAGO (AP) — Rollie Fingers, Joe Rudi and Vida Blue will remain with the Oakland A's for the rest of the season and the playoffs, attorneys for A's owner Charles O. Finley and baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn say.

Finley withdrew his request Tuesday for a preliminary order to overturn Kuhn's ruling that he could not sell the three stars to the Boston Red Sox and the New York Yankees.

"Neil, we're very happy, aren't we, about what took place?" Finley asked his lawyer, Neil Papiano of Los Angeles, after the postponement of further action in the case until Nov. 8.

"Yes, we are," Papiano told newsmen. He said Finley will seek a permanent injunction against Kuhn's action at that time plus more than $3.5 million in damages.

An attorney for Kuhn, Peter Bleakley of Washington, said he thought the fact that no preliminary order was issued against the commissioner constituted a victory.

Finley refused further comment except to say: "Kansas City is going to choke and the A's are going to get in the playoffs." He waved away a newsman who persisted in asking questions, saying, "Oh, please don't bother me."

By the time the hearing gets under way, the World Series will be over. Finley had sought to sell Blue to the Yankees for $1.5 million and the other two players to the Red Sox for $1 million each. Kuhn nullified the transaction, saying it was bad for baseball.

If the A's manage to overtake Kansas City and get into the playoffs, they will have the three stars at their disposal and a possible shot at the World Series. But all three are unsigned and, if they remain so at the end of the season, become free agents.

"The issue isn't the World Series," Papiano said. "The issue is the free agent draft, which comes in November. We hope for some rulings around that time."

Named as defendants in the suit are Kuhn, the Yankees and the Red Sox.

As originally filed June 25, the suit charged that Kuhn:

—Violated Finley's rights to due process and equal treatment under the U.S. Constitution by stopping the sale.

Jim McMurry, the top contender for the American Hot Rod Association Driver of the Year award, will be at the J.C. Penney Auto Center with his car, a 1973 AAF-C Funny Car, Saturday, September 18. Jim's car features a Keith Black hemi engine that generates 1800 horsepower with 440 cubic inches. McMurry, a 13-year veteran, recently finished fifth at the funny car nationals August 21. Oakland, Pittsburgh & Miami picked

NEW YORK (AP) — Having caught the bridal bouquet enough times to retire it, the Oakland Raiders are ready to shed that traditional runnerup role and return to the Super Bowl.

It's been nine long years since Oakland played for all the NFL marbles and more than once in that span, the Raiders were considered Super Bowl cinches. But something always seemed to go wrong. Welcome to 1976 when everything will go right.

First, of course, the Raiders must win the American Football Conference West Division title. That should be no major problem. Then, though, they have to capture the conference title, no easy task with Pittsburgh playing in the same corner of the NFL. The Steelers, after all, have won two straight Super Bowls and that kind of record can't be dismissed easily.

Pittsburgh is loaded again and should capture the Central Division while Miami may just bounce back into the playoffs by taking the East. For a wild card candidate, how about Cincinnati, whose misfortune it is to play in the same division as Pittsburgh.

After 14 weeks, the standings should look this way:

WEST DIVISION
Oakland Raiders
Denver Broncos
San Diego Chargers
Kansas City Chiefs
Tampa Bay Buccaneers

CENTRAL DIVISION
Pittsburgh Steelers
Cincinnati Bengals
Houston Oilers
Cleveland Browns

EAST DIVISION
Miami Dolphins
Baltimore Colts
Buffalo Bills
New England Patriots
New York Jets

The Raiders owned the best defense in the AFC last year and an awesome offense spearheaded by the pinpoint passing of left-hander Ken Stabler. The cast is unchanged except for the retirement of that place kicking Methuselah, 48-year-old George Blanda, who has been replaced by rookie Fred Steinfort out of Boston College.

Oakland, aiming for a ninth West crown in 10 years, also will enjoy a patsy schedule with only three games of their 14 against teams with winning records in 1975. One of those, however, will be the season opener against the Steelers.

Pittsburgh seems as strong as ever with Terry Brdshaw guiding one of the NFL's very best attacks headlined by runners like Franco Harris and Rocky Bleier and receivers like Lynn Swann. The defense is still intact and it all spells another Central title for Coach Chuck Noll's team.

In the East, Miami missed the playoffs a year ago and doesn't plan on having that happen again. Gone are some familiar faces like running back Mercury Morris and safety Jake Scott, but the Dolphins are still in good hands with holdovers like quarterback Bob Griese, and running backs Don Nottingham and Benny Malone.

Cincinnati seems set for a return to the AFC playoffs via the wild card route.

The Bengals, under new coach Bill Johnson, have added old pro Coy Bacon to toughen their defensive line; and two-time Heisman Trophy winner Archie Griffin could add some pizz-pazz to the Cincinnati ground game. The passing is handled by Ken Anderson, who led the league's quarterbacks last year.

Houston, so impressive a year ago, had a tough time of it during the exhibition season but should still make a run at the Central leaders. Old pro John Hadl will back up Dan Pastorini at quarterback. The Oilers have two outstanding receivers in Billy Johnson and Ken Burrough but seem thin at running back where Fred Willis and Ron Coleman are the holdover regulars.

Cleveland has to get better if for no other reason than how bad the Browns were last year. They've added a quality linebacker in Gerald Irons, who was squeezed out at Oakland, and wide receiver Paul Warfield, who started his pro career with the Browns. That's not bad.

In the East, Baltimore staged one of pro football's most startling turnarounds to make it to the playoffs a year ago. The young, talented Colts then almost lost Coach Ted Marchibroda on the eve of the season, but recovered him in another turnaround, this time by owner Robert Irsay, who may be the Charley Finley of football.

Buffalo wishes the loss of O.J. Simpson could be as temporary as Marchibroda's departure from Baltimore. Simpson's retirement robbed the Bills of pro football's premier running back and left the burden of the ground game on tough Jim Braxton and journeyman Vic Washington. Simpsons they are not.

New England also will operate without its biggest star of recent years, quarterback Jim Plunkett, who was dealt to San Francisco.

OUTDOOR TOPICS

by Bob Brewster
MERCURY OUTDOOR CONSULTANT

LICE AREN'T NICE

Some fish are lousy. At least that's the opinion of fishery biologists studying the outbreaks of fish lice which occur periodically in some parts of the country.

Most often the louse problem comes to the scientist's attention when a fish kill happens and the evidence of a massive louse infestation is proven by investigation and laboratory examination.

Biologists don't know a great deal about what happens to fish infested with lice, other than they die if the parasites occur in great numbers. Under normal conditions lice are present in low numbers, but occasionally a major outbreak of lice occurs and fish are then killed by their parasitic companions. Even the exact conditions required to set off an abnormal hatch of fish lice aren't known, although it is associated with warm water.

Lice are believed to cause death to fish in a couple of ways. One, they inject quantities of a toxic substance into the fish's bloodstream. Secondly, lice destroy the protective mucus covering which all fish have on their skin, and fungi infection then sets in damaging the fish and causing death.

In answer to questions asked by Mercury outboards' fishing department, scientists say there is no danger of harm to persons eating fish which have lice. The louse is an external creature, living on the fish's skin and is destroyed and removed when the fish is scaled and prepared for cooking.

You can't readily see fish lice with the naked eye, unless you've had some experience looking for them. Most mature lice are less than 1/16 of an inch long, and many are so transparent it is impossible to spot them without a magnifying glass. Perhaps the most encouraging news for anglers is that lousy fish are few and far between. Major cases of lice infestation rarely happen.

Cincinnati seems set for a return to the AFC playoffs via the wild card route.

The Bengals, under new coach Bill Johnson, have added old pro Coy Bacon to toughen their defensive line; and two-time Heisman Trophy winner Archie Griffin could add some pizz-pazz to the Cincinnati ground game. The passing is handled by Ken Anderson, who led the league's quarterbacks last year.

Houston, so impressive a year ago, had a tough time of it during the exhibition season but should still make a run at the Central leaders. Old pro John Hadl will back up Dan Pastorini at quarterback. The Oilers have two outstanding receivers in Billy Johnson and Ken Burrough but seem thin at running back where Fred Willis and Ron Coleman are the holdover regulars.

Cleveland has to get better if for no other reason than how bad the Browns were last year. They've added a quality linebacker in Gerald Irons, who was squeezed out at Oakland, and wide receiver Paul Warfield, who started his pro career with the Browns. That's not bad.

In the East, Baltimore staged one of pro football's most startling turnarounds to make it to the playoffs a year ago. The young, talented Colts then almost lost Coach Ted Marchibroda on the eve of the season, but recovered him in another turnaround, this time by owner Robert Irsay, who may be the Charley Finley of football.

Buffalo wishes the loss of O.J. Simpson could be as temporary as Marchibroda's departure from Baltimore. Simpson's retirement robbed the Bills of pro football's premier running back and left the burden of the ground game on tough Jim Braxton and journeyman Vic Washington. Simpsons they are not.

New England also will operate without its biggest star of recent years, quarterback Jim Plunkett, who was dealt to San Francisco.

LICE AREN'T NICE

Some fish are lousy. At least that's the opinion of fishery biologists studying the outbreaks of fish lice which occur periodically in some parts of the country.

Most often the louse problem comes to the scientist's attention when a fish kill happens and the evidence of a massive louse infestation is proven by investigation and laboratory examination.

Biologists don't know a great deal about what happens to fish infested with lice, other than they die if the parasites occur in great numbers. Under normal conditions lice are present in low numbers, but occasionally a major outbreak of lice occurs and fish are then killed by their parasitic companions. Even the exact conditions required to set off an abnormal hatch of fish lice aren't known, although it is associated with warm water.

Lice are believed to cause death to fish in a couple of ways. One, they inject quantities of a toxic substance into the fish's bloodstream. Secondly, lice destroy the protective mucus covering which all fish have on their skin, and fungi infection then sets in damaging the fish and causing death.

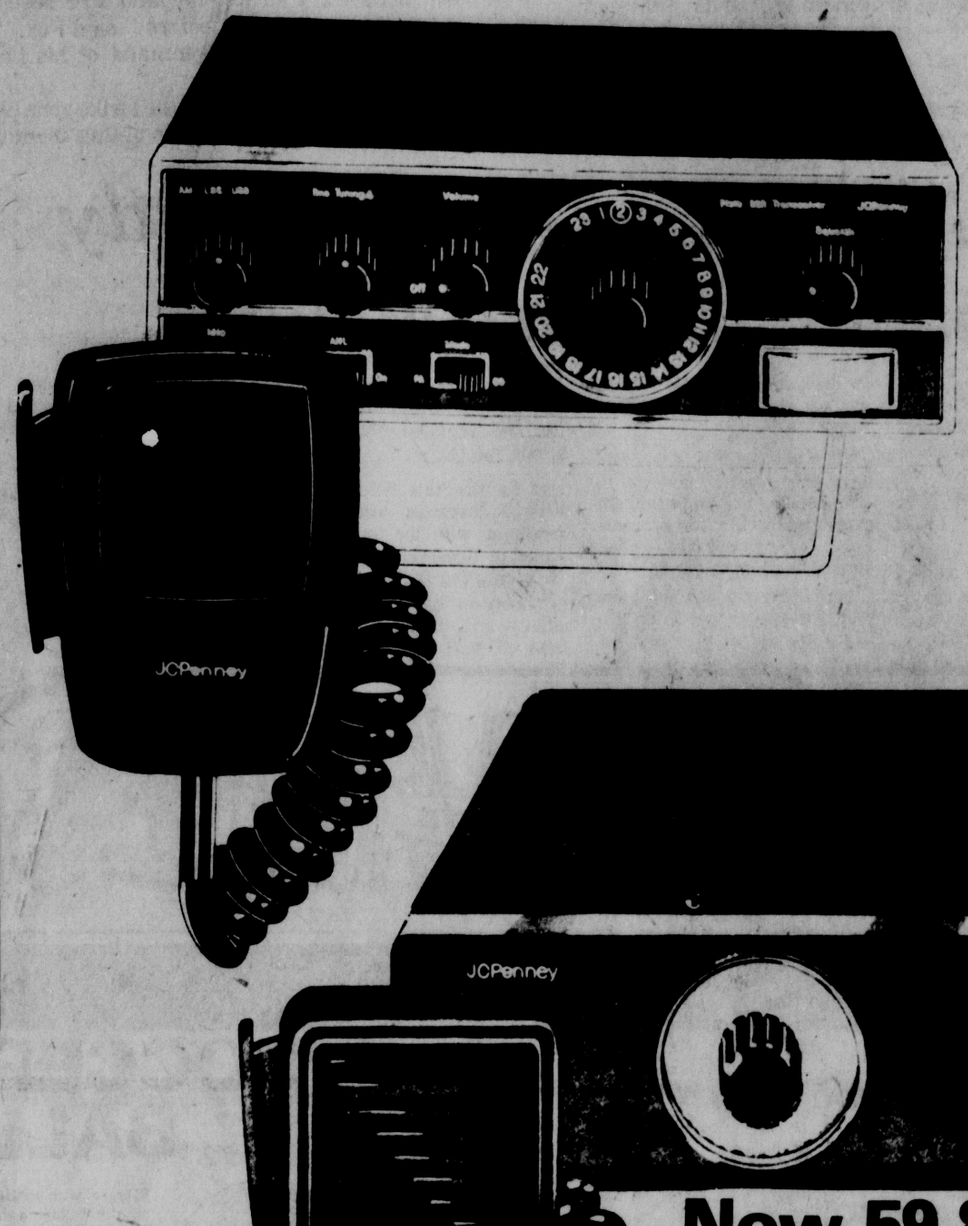

In answer to questions asked by Mercury outboards' fishing department, scientists say there is no danger of harm to persons eating fish which have lice. The louse is an external creature, living on the fish's skin and is destroyed and removed when the fish is scaled and prepared for cooking.

You can't readily see fish lice with the naked eye, unless you've had some experience looking for them. Most mature lice are less than 1/16 of an inch long, and many are so transparent it is impossible to spot them without a magnifying glass. Perhaps the most encouraging news for anglers is that lousy fish are few and far between. Major cases of lice infestation rarely happen.

Cards rally to beat Expos 7-4

MONTREAL (AP) — One of the most baffling situations in sports is seeing a player or a team look so good one minute and then appear so terrible the next.

"It's not something you can figure out just like that," says Charlie Fox, the man who found himself in a nightmarish situation last Saturday when he was appointed manager of the Montreal Expos after Karl Kuehl was fired.

Here is what Fox and a slim crowd of 2,107, the lowest in Expos' history, saw Tuesday night at Jarry Park. The Expos had broken out for four runs against the St. Louis Cardinals and Don Stanhouse was breezing along with a three-hitter.

About 20 minutes later, the Cardinals sent nine men to the plate, scored four runs, dispatched Stanhouse to the showers and went on to post a 7-4 victory against the Expos, handing Montreal its 88th loss of the season against only 45 victories.

"I've been in baseball all my life and I've seen it happen just like that many times before," said Fox. "A pitcher will lose his rhythm or command of his best pitches.

"Instead of getting the ball down in the strike zone like he was earlier, suddenly the pitcher is gettng them up where the other guys can hit them."

Stanhouse then wandered into the manager's office where newsmen were talking with Fox.

"I don't know where my mind was," Stanhouse said. "I guess it was somewhere down in Alabama."

That seems like a strange place for a pitcher's mind to be suddenly, especially when he still lives in his hometown of Du Quoin, Ill.

"But, it won't happen again, that's for sure," he concluded.

Stanhouse didn't figure in the decision. The loss went to reliever Chuck Taylor, 2-3, who gave up the go-ahead run on Keith Hernandez' run-scoring single in the seventh inning.

Hernandez started the fourrun St. Louis rally in the sixth when he singled with two out. The hit that scored what proved to be the winning run in the seventh also came with two out.

Ron Fairly, the former Expos' infielder-outfielder, and Hector Cruz also drove in two runs each. Fairly came in as a pinch hitter for Luis Alvarado in the sixth.

Del Unser drove in two Montreal runs in the second inning with a double and he scored one of the two Expos' runs in the fifth when he singled, stole second and scored on a double by Larry Parrish.

Mike Wallace, the second of three St. Louis pitchers, got credit for the triumph after relieving starter Harry Rasmussen. It was his third success in five decisions. Bill Greif, who worked 2 2-3 innings, was given credit for his fifth save of the year.

Big Eight teams getting ready for openers this weekend

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Kansas and Kansas State made roster changes Tuesday while they and other Big Eight Conference schools wound down preparations for Saturday's season openers.

Only Kansas, a 28-16 winner last week over Oregon State, has already seen action. Jayhawk Coach Bud Moore switched Harry Murphy from safety to defensive end Tuesday and wished he'd made the move three weeks ago.

"It was something we should have done before," Moore said after sending his troops through a two-hour workout in preparation for Saturday's game against Washington State.

"But we didn't know how Tom Fitch's leg would be. He had come off surgery and we didn't know how much he could help us at safety." Fitch, a junior, has replaced Murphy at strong safety.

At Kansas State, Wildcat boss Ellis Rainsberger installed a freshman with the impressive name of Roosevelt H. Duncan III at starting fullback.

"Roosevelt has great running ability and outstanding quickness off the line," Rainsberger said. "He's broken some big plays and he'll make a good account of himself this Saturday."

Cornhusker Coach Tom Osborne said his team was "well prepared" and expected "a lot of different things from the Louisiana State offense."

AP picks Arizona State, Notre Dame & USC to win

NEW YORK (AP) — It's decision-making time. And it has nothing to do with people named Ford or Carter, although it wouldn't be surprising if Jerry Ford, a one-time Michigan center, dropped in to see how the football team is coming along when he kicks off his campaign in Ann Arbor this week.

No, the immediate choices lie between Nebraska and Louisiana State, Arizona State and UCLA, Ohio State and Michigan State, Pitt and Notre Dame ... people like that.

Our Presidential favorite will remain a secret; that's why they have curtains around voting booths. The college football picks are yours for the price of this newspaper.

Nebraska at Louisiana State: The Cornhuskers had all sorts of trouble with LSU a year ago, winning by only 10-7. This time, the Cornhuskers are ranked No. 1 in the nation, but it still won't be a runaway ... Nebraska 21-14.

UCLA at Arizona State: The Sun Devils make no bones about it — they're going for No. 1. You can see them do it on national television in a unique Thursday night game, if the cameraman can stay with the ASU speed demons ... Arizona State 28-14.

Michigan State at Ohio State: For a change, someone other than Woody Hayes is out for revenge. Michigan State is steaming because Hayes — among others — whispered their recruiting misdeeds into NCAA ears, leading to a whopping three-year probation. New Coach Darryl Rogers said he doesn't know Hayes or Columbus, Ohio, very well but he doesn't like either one. He'll like them even less after ... Ohio State 24-7.

Pitt at Notre Dame: From 1965-73, Notre Dame outscored Pitt 427-74. But the Panthers made it close in '74 and whipped the Irish last year behind Tony Dorsett's amazing 303-yard galloping. The winner of this game goes right into the thick of the national championship picture ... Notre Dame 17-14.

Oklahoma at Vanderbilt: No team has ever won three national championships in a row and only one team has a chance this year ... Oklahoma 38-14.

Alabama at Mississippi: How much was Ole Miss looking ahead when Memphis State zapped 'em last weekend? Too much, probably. Last week, the Tigers; this week, a Bear named Bryant ... Alabama 28-7.

Texas at Boston College: With Earl Campbell and a couple of speedsters named Johnny Jones, Darrell Royal's Wishbone could become a Royal-T — royalty, get it? So will B.C. ... Texas 29-13.

Missouri at Southern California: The Trojans are aware of what underdog Missouri did to Alabama in last year's opener. As it turned out, that game cost 'Bama the national championship ... Southern Cal 31-17.

Stanford at Penn State: Will Stanford be looking ahead to Michigan more than Penn State will be looking ahead to Ohio State? The same situation prevailed last year, Penn State winning 34-14. This time ... Penn State 19-14.

California at Georgia: This one should be a "breather" for the Bears since their next two games, also on the road, are at Oklahoma and Arizona State... Cal 28-14.

North Carolina at Florida: The Tar Heels used a fake-injury, no-huddle trick play to dump Miami of Ohio last weekend. Another ranked team coming up ... Florida 30-13.

Washington State at Kansas: Jackie Sherrill, State's new coach, may turn the program around, but not this fast ... Kansas 28-14.

Rutgers at Navy: The Scarlet Knights are looking for an unbeaten season to match the one turned in by the basketball team. Surprise, surprise ... Navy 18-14.

Duke at Tennessee: The feeling in this corner is that the Vols will be the surprise team in the South ... Tennessee 24-10.

Marchibroda is back with Colts

BALTIMORE (AP) — "The prime thing is not that Ted Marchibroda is back. It's that the team is united and ready to play football."

Those words from Ted Marchibroda signaled his return Tuesday as the Baltimore Colts' head coach and gave Baltimore football fans renewed hope they will see another winning season.

Marchibrodas rehiring ended a two-day standoff between players and assistant coaches on one side and the National Football League club's management on the other.

From all outward appearnaces, Marchibroda returns from his unscheduled "vacation" in a much stronger position than when he resigned Sunday.

Marchibroda told reporters at the team's St. Mary's Seminary training camp he had been given "full control of football matters" on the Colts and that his contract, due to expire at the end of the 1977 season, had been extended another year.

The confrontation began Sunday when Marchibroda, NFL Coach of the Year last season for directing the Colts to a 10-4 season and the American Conference Eastern Division title, submitted his resignation.

The action came after Robert Irsay, team owner, stormed into the Colts' locker room after a preseason loss to Detroit and berated the players and Marchibroda.

When Marchibroda resigned, the players, led by quarterback Bert Jones and running back Lydell Mitchell, expressed support for the head coach and asked Thomas and Irsay to bring him back.

At least two assistant coaches, defensive coordinator Maxie Baughan and line coach Whitey Dovell, hinted they might quit if Marchibroda wasn't rehired.

New Coach Darryl Rogers said he doesn't know Hayes or Columbus, Ohio, very well but he doesn't like either one. He'll like them even less after ... Ohio State 24-7.

Pitt at Notre Dame: From 1965-73, Notre Dame outscored Pitt 427-74. But the Panthers made it close in '74 and whipped the Irish last year behind Tony Dorsett's amazing 303-yard galloping. The winner of this game goes right into the thick of the national championship picture ... Notre Dame 17-14.

Oklahoma at Vanderbilt: No team has ever won three national championships in a row and only one team has a chance this year ... Oklahoma 38-14.

Alabama at Mississippi: How much was Ole Miss looking ahead when Memphis State zapped 'em last weekend? Too much, probably. Last week, the Tigers; this week, a Bear named Bryant ... Alabama 28-7.

Texas at Boston College: With Earl Campbell and a couple of speedsters named Johnny Jones, Darrell Royal's Wishbone could become a Royal-T — royalty, get it? So will B.C. ... Texas 29-13.

Missouri at Southern California: The Trojans are aware of what underdog Missouri did to Alabama in last year's opener. As it turned out, that game cost 'Bama the national championship ... Southern Cal 31-17.

Stanford at Penn State: Will Stanford be looking ahead to Michigan more than Penn State will be looking ahead to Ohio State? The same situation prevailed last year, Penn State winning 34-14. This time ... Penn State 19-14.

California at Georgia: This one should be a "breather" for the Bears since their next two games, also on the road, are at Oklahoma and Arizona State... Cal 28-14.

North Carolina at Florida: The Tar Heels used a fake-injury, no-huddle trick play to dump Miami of Ohio last weekend. Another ranked team coming up .... Florida 30-13.

Washington State at Kansas: Jackie Sherrill, State's new coach, may turn the program around, but not this fast ... Kansas 28-14.

Rutgers at Navy: The Scarlet Knights are looking for an unbeaten season to match the one turned in by the basketball team. Surprise, surprise ... Navy 18-14.

Duke at Tennessee: The feeling in this corner is that the Vols will be the surprise team in the South ... Tennessee 24-10.

Marchibroda is back with Colts

BALTIMORE (AP) — "The prime thing is not that Ted Marchibroda is back. It's that the team is united and ready to play football."

Those words from Ted Marchibroda signaled his return Tuesday as the Baltimore Colts' head coach and gave Baltimore football fans renewed hope they will see another winning season.

Marchibrodas rehiring ended a two-day standoff between players and assistant coaches on one side and the National Football League club's management on the other.

From all outward appearnaces, Marchibroda returns from his unscheduled "vacation" in a much stronger position than when he resigned Sunday.

Marchibroda told reporters at the team's St. Mary's Seminary training camp he had been given "full control of football matters" on the Colts and that his contract, due to expire at the end of the 1977 season, had been extended another year.

The confrontation began Sunday when Marchibroda, NFL Coach of the Year last season for directing the Colts to a 10-4 season and the American Conference Eastern Division title, submitted his resignation.

The action came after Robert Irsay, team owner, stormed into the Colts' locker room after a preseason loss to Detroit and berated the players and Marchibroda.

When Marchibroda resigned, the players, led by quarterback Bert Jones and running back Lydell Mitchell, expressed support for the head coach and asked Thomas and Irsay to bring him back.

At least two assistant coaches, defensive coordinator Maxie Baughan and line coach Whitey Dovell, hinted they might quit if Marchibroda wasn't rehired.

Kauffman & Wright voted to Mo. Sports Hall of Fame

COLUMBIA, Mo., — Two baseball personalities will be inducted into Missouri's Sports Hall of Fame at the first induction dinner held in Kansas City on Sunday, Oct. 31 at the Plaza Inn.

The 1976 honorees, announced by Executive Secretary Don Faurot, are: Ewing Kauffman, owner of the Kansas City Royals baseball team; and Glenn Wright--one of the greatest of major league shortstops in the 1920's and 1930's.

Tickets for the dinner are $10.50 each. A reception will start at 6 p.m. in the Plaza Inn, with dinner at 7 p.m. Tickets may be obtained by contacting: Dale Rohr, Kansas City Royals Baseball Club, P.O. Box 1969, Kansas City, Mo.; and Don Faurot, Hearnes Building, University of Missouri, Columbia, Mo., 65201.

The two new members, chosen by the state's sportswriters and sportscasters, are native Missourians. Eligible candidates must have been born in Missouri, or have achieved prominence in the state.

Born in Kansas City, Kauffman is president of a large pharmaceutical firm there. He was a successful bidder for the American League expansion franchise in 1968.

A native of Archie, Mo., Wright grew up in Harrisonville--and attended the University of Missouri as a freshman. He went directly to the major [illegible] playing five [illegible] with Pittsburgh [illegible] pennant-winning [illegible] also captained the Brooklyn Dodgers for five years.

Wright's lifetime batting average was .294, and his 601 assists in 1924 still is a major league record. He now makes his home in California.

Favorites win at Forest Hills

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Chris Evert did it the easy way. She always does it the easy way.

Bjorn Borg and Manuel Orantes did it the hard way. Borg and Orantes are used to doing it the hard way.

And Ilie Nastase did it his way, coming through in a storm of controversy. Nastase is always surrounded by controversy.

But one way or another they all advanced to the quarter-finals of the U.S. Open Tennis Championships. They started playing tennis at the West Side Tennis Club at 11:30 in the morning Tuesday and they didn't get done until after 1 a.m. And they saved the best match for last.

Nastase, the temperamental Romanian who terrorized officials, fans, ballboys, cameramen and Hans-Jurgen Pohmann earlier in the tournament, squared off against muscular Roscoe Tanner in the final match of the evening session. They played for 3 hours and 15 minutes. It was gruelling tennis, pressure tennis, brilliant tennis.

And when it was over, after all the booming serves and searing forehands and crackling volleys, it came down to whether one tennis ball landed a half-inch this way or a half-inch that way.

The sets were even at two each and the games were even at four. Tanner, the handsome, blond southpaw, was serving at 30-40. Nastase hit a forehand volley and the ball flicked close to the line. The linesman called it out. Nastase cried out in disbelief. The umpire overruled the linesman. The head referee was called.

Finally, with both players agreeing and the linesman still dissenting, the ball was ruled in and Nastase had his break. He won his service at love to take the match 7-5, 6-7, 1-6, 7-6, 6-4

"I never even thought the ball would be called out," said the 24-year-old Tanner. "I definitely saw the ball in. It bounced half on the line and as I see the rules that is in."

Nastase's victory boosted him into the quarters against Dick Stockton of Dallas, a 6-3, 7-5, 6-4 winner over Jairo Velasco. The other men's quarters match Borg-Orantes, Jimmy Connors-Jan Kodes and Guillermo Vilas-Eddie Dibbs.

Borg, down two sets to none and 0-2 in the third, rallied to beat dogged Brian Gottfried 6-7, 3-6, 6-4, 6-4, 6-2 in a torturous 3½-hour match. And Orantes, the defending champion, overcame arm problems to survive a 2:45 marathon with Stan Smith 3-6, 1-6, 6-2, 7-6, 6-1.

Gottfried played brilliantly against the second-seeded Borg for two sets in the afternoon before fading before the speedy Swede's sharp passing shots. Gottfried had success at the net in the first two sets but was passed repeatedly in the final three.

Smith, the former champion who has been making a startling comeback of late, cruised through the first two sets against a sluggish Orantes. But the Spaniard came to life in the third set, won the fourth-set tiebreaker with a brilliant lob and coasted through the final set against the sagging Smith.

Miss Evert, who doesn't waste time haggling about line calls or staging heroic comebacks, prefers to beat her opponents quickly and decisivy1. She overwhelmed British blonde Sue Barker 6-1, 6-0 in a tidy 45-minute affair. Miss Evert has played three matches so far and has lost just two games.

The day-night sessions drew a combined crowd of 30,702 — the largest one-day audience for a tournament in U.S. tennis history. And they saw a lot of tennis.

Royal lead cut to five as California wins 2-1

KANSAS CITY (AP) — What Tony Solaita says and what Tony Solaita does aren't always the same thing.

"I'm pulling for the Royals. As soon as we leave, I hope they win every game," said Solaita after driving in both runs Tuesday night to trigger the California Angels to a 2-1 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

"I hate to see the Royals lose, but I'm with the Angels now I wouldn't have any respect for myself if I didn't try as hard as I can."

It was the third straight loss and the eighth in nine games for Kansas City, whose lead in the American League West shrunk to five games over Oakland, which beat Chicago, 4-0. The Angels have won seven of their last nine.

Solaita was claimed by the Angels in mid-June after the Royals placed him on waivers, but the native of American Samoa held no malice for the now-slumping Royals.

"I think Oakland is too tense. They're just realizing someone else might win this thing," the muscular first baseman said. "They think they can catch them (the Royals), but I don't think they can.

"Whitey (Herzog) has done a great job with them and he's made the most of their pitching. The guys here are just in a slump right now."

Solaita gave the Angels a 1-0 lead in the first with a sacrifice fly that scored Dave Chalk, then broke a 1-1 deadlock with a sixth-inning single that brought home Mike Easler.

Right-hander Don Kirkwood, meanwhile, disposed of the Royals on just three hits, two by George Brett. Kansas City's only run came in the third when Tom Poquette singled home Fred Patek, who had walked, stolen second and moved to third on a flyout.

"I don't know what it is," said Kirkwood, 6-10, who has limited Kansas City to just two earned runs in 24 2-3 innings this year. "I just mentally prepare myself better (against the Royals), I guess. I have a better idea of what I want to do, a sort of game plan.

Kirkwood walked four batters, but Patek was the only baserunner who got past second as he picked Brett off first, and Amos Otis and Hal McRae were caught stealing.

"I guess you could say I'm stingy against them. I wish I could say that about other teams," he smiled.

The Angels collected only seven hits off Kansas City starter Marty Pattin, 6-12, but it was enough against the innocuous Royals attack.

"We're playing like we're scared to win, and don't know how," summed up Kansas City Manager Whitey Herzog.

Carter says he would fire Kelley

Associated Press Writer

While President Ford campaigns from the security of the White House, Jimmy Carter is out pressing the flesh. It seems that meeting the public has more hazards.

Campaigning through the Northeast on Tuesday, Carter said he would have fired FBI director Clarence Kelley and speculated that cheating by Richard Nixon and other Washington big shots encourages crime.

But for a group of angry demonstrators in Pennsylvania the big issue was abortion and they were noisy about it.

Carter met the demonstrators as he arrived Tuesday night in Scranton, Pa. They lined the route Carter took from the airport to his hotel, waving antiabortion signs and shouting at the candidate.

And they mingled with Carter supporters at the hotel as the candidate arrived, making a throng estimated by police at 1,000 persons, with one side shouting "We want Carter" and the other chanting "Life, life, life."

Meanwhile, President Ford remained in Washington, making some unusual appearances designed to make use of the White House as a backdrop for what his campaigners hope will show him to be working instead of campaigning.

Carter's running mate, Sen. Walter Mondale, said Ford was "practicing being president" and is "failing to take his campaign to the people."

Carter, faced with the crowd outside his hotel Tuesday night, first tried to greet supporters and shake hands. But in the crush of bodies and the din of the conflicting shouts, Secret Service agents circled the candidate and hustled him into the hotel.

Carter was not struck or injured and did not appear shaken by the incident. Inside the hotel, he smiled and waved to people in the lobby.

Demonstrators outside the hotel said they opposed Carter's stand on abortion. Carter opposes a constitutional amendment outlawing abortion, although he says he personally is against abortion.

He is running on a party platform that says it recognizes religious and ethical concerns over abortion, but opposes a constitutional amendment.

Earlier, Carter resurrected the memory of resigned President Nixon in arguing that wrongdoing by Republican big shots has led other Americans to conclude that breaking the law is okay.

And the former Georgia governor said if he were president he would have fired FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley, who received gifts from subordinates and $355 worth of government-supplied window decor.

But asked if he will fire Kelley if elected president, Carter replied, "I will cross that bridge if I come to it."

"When people throughout the country, particularly young people, see Richard Nixon cheating, lying, leaving the highest office in disgrace ... when you see the head of the FBI break a little law and stay there, it gives everybody the sense that crime must be okay."

He said people ask themselves, "If big shots in Washington can get away with it, why can't I?"

Carter has said he does not plan to make Ford's pardon of Nixon an issue and he did not mention it.

Meanwhile, Ford's stay-at-home campaign relied on a variety of events Tuesday aimed at showing him at work in the White House.

He held formal Rose Garden ceremonies Tuesday before television cameras to sign two bills that ordinarily would have been signed with little fanfare.

One bill provides funds for victims of the collapse of Idaho's Teton Dam. White House aides made sure Idaho Sen. Frank Church, who had sought the Democratic presidential nomination, was positioned behind Ford as the television cameras recorded the signing.

The other bill signed by Ford was a rerun of a measure Ford vetoed earlier this year. It adds $240 million to authorized funding for federal day-care services for children.

Later, Ford made an unusual appearance in the White House press center to read a statement demanding "a full accounting, without further delay, of all Americans missing in action in Vietnam."

The statement was a reaction to a day-old development in which Vietnam listed as dead a dozen American airmen who had been listed as missing in action. Ford's statement was delivered at an hour when it would be fresh for the evening television news broadcasts.

Mondale, hopping from state to state Tuesday, criticized Ford for failing to take his campaign to the people.

"There are two candidates for president of the United States. Neither has been elected president," Mondale said in a speech in Albuquerque, N.M. Noting Carter's intense personal campaign, he said, "One has gone out to the people. Another is sitting behind his desk hoping the American people will elect him."

Earlier, in San Diego, Mondale said that while he and Carter were meeting the people of the country, Ford was "sitting behind his desk practicing being president."

In other political developments Tuesday:

—The U.S. attorney's office in Kansas City, Mo., said it has completed its investigation of charges that delegates to the GOP convention may have been bribed. And Justice Department officials in Washington say it is unlikely that anyone will be prosecuted.

The allegations were raised shortly before Ford was nominated at the party convention last month when Illinois Gov. Richard Ogilvie, a Ford backer, charged that two of the President's delegates had been offered bribes to vote for challenger Ronald Reagan.

Justice Department officials said the evidence looked "pretty slim."

—Rep. Robert Sikes, who was reprimanded by the House of representatives for his financial dealings, was renominated in his northern Florida district, defeating 26-year-old John Benton Jr. in a primary race. Sikes, who got 75 per cent of the vote in his district, will have no GOP opposition in the November election.

—Rep. Morris K. Udall, who sought the Democratic presidential nomination, and House GOP Leader John Rhodes easily won renomination in their Arizona districts.

Ford calls for details on MIA's

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford welcomed Vietnam's decision to reveal the fate of 12 missing American airmen but said Tuesday that normalization of relations with Hanoi cannot take place until all missing American fighting men are accounted for.

Appearing briefly before reporters in the White House, Ford read a statement in which he contended that the Vietnamese government has information on the fates of hundreds of missing Americans.

Calling for "a full accounting without further delay" of all the missing, Ford said, "It is callous and cruel to exploit human suffering in the hope of diplomatic advantage...normalization of relations cannot take place until Vietnam accounts for all our men missing in action."

The President said that at his direction, the American Embassy in Paris contacted Vietnamese representatives there Tuesday to demand an immediate ful accounting.

He acted after the Vietnamese government supplied the embassy in Paris Monday with the names of 12 U.S. airmen it said were killed in the Vietnam war. The 12 had been listed by the Pentagon as missing in action.

The Pentagon said six of the 12 missing pilots, all shot down between 1965 and 1968, had previously been carried on U.S. rolls as dead.

Wild repudiates claim about Dole

WASHINGTON (AP) — Claude Wild Jr., Gulf Oil Corp.'s former chief lobbyist, today repudiated his claim that he had given $2,000 in 1970 to Sen. Bob Dole, the Republican vice-presidential candidate.

"I have been in error and consequently have done a serious disservice to Sen. Dole," Wild said in a statement.

Dole immediately accepted Wild's apology, calling the matter "an unfortunate incident." The senator added: "We're moving ahead with the campaign."

At issue was Wild's claim to reporters earlier this week that he had given $2,000 to Dole in 1970 to pass on to other Republican Senate candidates in that year.

Dole earlier had acknowledged that he had testified before a federal grand jury last March on the question of Gulf contributions, but that he had received no such funds from Wild either in 1970 or in 1973.

Wild's statement did not speak about other allegations that Dole received illegal corporate Gulf funds in 1973 — something which the GOP nominee has repeatedly denied — but discussed only the 1970 matter.

The former Gulf lobbyist said in his statement that he had made the claims to reporters without checking his records.

"I feel confident I confused the $2,000 in cash with the $2,000 check made out to another individual," Wild said. "I make a sincere apology to Sen. Dole for my impromptu remarks without benefit of information I could have obtained from my records."

He blamed the mistake on "the past three years of confusion, frustration and disarray in my personal life." He said he was referring to various legal proceedings and Senate inquiries into Gulf political contributions.

On Labor Day, Dole told reporters he was mystified by the allegation that he had received $2,000 from Wild in 1970, the year before he became chairman of the Republican National Committee.

He said federal prosecutors had showed him a check stub for the $2,000, apparently drawn on a legal Gulf "Good Government Committee" fund. Dole said that the name "Dole or Dale" was on the stub, with the indication that the money was to be passed on to someone else.

The Republican candidate said he had no recollection of such a check. But he told reporters the transaction also involved a prominent political figure in Washington. Dole did not name the political figure.

NBC News reported today that the other name involved was that of Interior Secretary Thomas Kleppe, who in 1970 waged an unsuccessful campaign in North Dakota for the Senate.

A Dole spokesman declined to confirm or deny the NBC report, claiming it was "a moot issue" in light of the Wild statement, which the spokesman said completely divorced Dole from the transfer of funds.

There was no immediate comment from Kleppe.

Dole has told reporters that he made President Ford aware of his appearance at the grand jury before Ford chose him last month to be his running mate.

Scott has been accused of receiving up to $100,000 from Wild from 1960 to 1973. Scott has denied ever knowingly accepting corporate money from Gulf, which would be illegal under federal campaign laws.

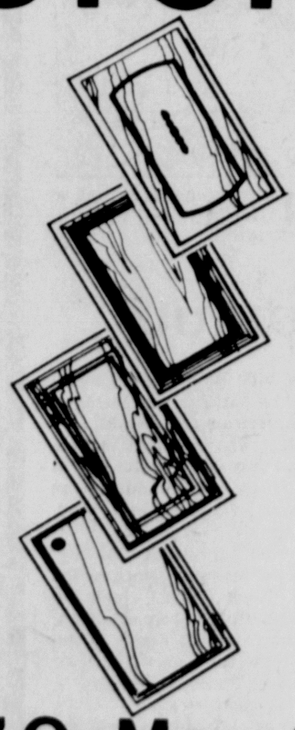

In his statement, Wild noted that in the past two days he had made statements to the news media indicating that he had made the $2,000 available to Dole or a member of his staff in 1970.

Wild repudiates claim about Dole

WASHINGTON (AP) — Claude Wild Jr., Gulf Oil Corp.'s former chief lobbyist, today repudiated his claim that he had given $2,000 in 1970 to Sen. Bob Dole, the Republican vice-presidential candidate.

"I have been in error and consequently have done a serious disservice to Sen. Dole," Wild said in a statement.

Dole immediately accepted Wild's apology, calling the matter "an unfortunate incident." The senator added: "We're moving ahead with the campaign."

At issue was Wild's claim to reporters earlier this week that he had given $2,000 to Dole in 1970 to pass on to other Republican Senate candidates in that year.

Dole earlier had acknowledged that he had testified before a federal grand jury last March on the question of Gulf contributions, but that he had received no such funds from Wild either in 1970 or in 1973.

Wild's statement did not speak about other allegations that Dole received illegal corporate Gulf funds in 1973 — something which the GOP nominee has repeatedly denied — but discussed only the 1970 matter.

The former Gulf lobbyist said in his statement that he had made the claims to reporters without checking his records.

"I feel confident I confused the $2,000 in cash with the $2,000 check made out to another individual," Wild said. "I make a sincere apology to Sen. Dole for my impromptu remarks without benefit of information I could have obtained from my records."

He blamed the mistake on "the past three years of confusion, frustration and disarray in my personal life." He said he was referring to various legal proceedings and Senate inquiries into Gulf political contributions.

On Labor Day, Dole told reporters he was mystified by the allegation that he had received $2,000 from Wild in 1970, the year before he became chairman of the Republican National Committee.

He said federal prosecutors had showed him a check stub for the $2,000, apparently drawn on a legal Gulf "Good Government Committee" fund. Dole said that the name "Dole or Dale" was on the stub, with the indication that the money was to be passed on to someone else.

The Republican candidate said he had no recollection of such a check. But he told reporters the transaction also involved a prominent political figure in Washington. Dole did not name the political figure.

NBC News reported today that the other name involved was that of Interior Secretary Thomas Kleppe, who in 1970 waged an unsuccessful campaign in North Dakota for the Senate.

A Dole spokesman declined to confirm or deny the NBC report, claiming it was "a moot issue" in light of the Wild statement, which the spokesman said completely divorced Dole from the transfer of funds.

There was no immediate comment from Kleppe.

Dole has told reporters that he made President Ford aware of his appearance at the grand jury before Ford chose him last month to be his running mate.

Scott has been accused of receiving up to $100,000 from Wild from 1960 to 1973. Scott has denied ever knowingly accepting corporate money from Gulf, which would be illegal under federal campaign laws.

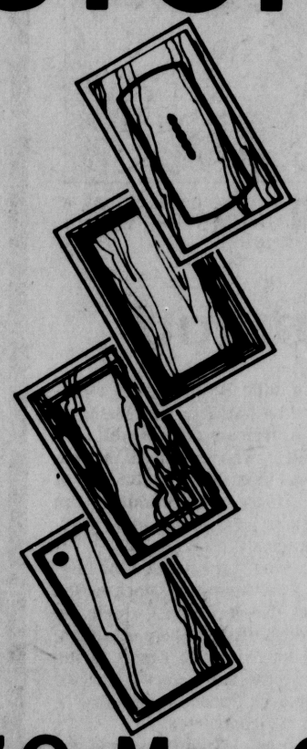

In his statement, Wild noted that in the past two days he had made statements to the news media indicating that he had made the $2,000 available to Dole or a member of his staff in 1970.

Burial will be in the Piggott Cemetery at Piggott, Ark.

Proposed gas plant center of debate

BERNIE — Threat of terrorist activity was a spectre raised by citizens Tuesday night at a city council meeting in arguments against the location of a proposed gas plant on property owned by the Bernie School District.

"There are some nuts in this town right now who would take delight in blowing it up," Judy Perkins told the council almost tearfully.

It seemed most of the nearly twenty persons standing in the city administration building agreed with her comments. "Good for you," one said under her breath.

"We are talking about tying up this ground for 99 years risking an explosion so you can sleep at night" Mrs. Perkins said.

She was just one of a number of citizens speaking out against the proposed location of the plant.

Another woman Peggy Causey asked "You wouldn't mind sending your children to the school knowing some nut could blow it up? If some nut blows it up will you be willing to come to the funeral?"

The gas peak shaving system uses propane gas which will be mixed with the city's natural gas to insure an adequate supply of fuel during cold winters, but both Mayor R.B. Woods and the city engineer Randy Thomas of St. Louis said the system is safe.

Thomas had selected 8 possible sites to put the gas plant. He said Tuesday night that safety was not a factor in the choice since "it would be safe wherever you put it."

Woods explained that of the eight sites none were for sale and the city did not want to go the route of using eminent domain.

"The only alternate we have is condemning an old woman's ground" Wood said.

It was pointed out that the other sites are also near the school and if the city is forced to use eminent domain the plant will not be ready for this winter.

Guy Perkins who owns a home in the area where the plant is planned to be built, brought up a danger of an accident; "Given 99 years I contend there will be an accident. These fittings can go and if it does and the gas drifts towards the school or my home, what will the result be?"

The city has signed a lease with the board of education for 99 years, but the council has not decided to place the gas system on the property.

Woods said a decision is expected at the councils next meeting of Sept. 20.

The discussion continued for almost two hours when Thomas volunteered to talk privately with the group. He brought the people to the library adjoining the council room to discuss the technical aspects of project.

Other action taken by the council last night at the meeting which lasted until about 11 p.m. included applying for a $400,000 block grant for a community building, elevated water storage system and a housing rehabilitation loan program.

Waters and Associates of Sikeston were retained to oversee the elvated storage project and Pat Donellan of Poplar Bluff an architect was retained to make the preliminary design on the community building.

Woods also appointed a committee to work with the architect to help decide what should go in the building.

The city should know if it will receive the grant by the first of the year Wood said.

In other action the council approved the updated comprehensive plan prepared by the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission; passed an ordinance relating to the city sewers spelling out what could and could not be put in the sewers; and appointed a committee to look into Cable television.

Hearnes starting campaign with $22

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Warren E. Hearnes is starting his campaign for the U.S. Senate with empty pockets. According to reports on file here Tuesday, the former Missouri governor has only $22 available to him from his campaign committee.

Hearns' report was one of several filed with the Campaign Reporting Division of the secretary of state's office. The reports account for money spent and received through Aug. 23 for candidates in the Aug. 3 primary election.

Congressman Jerry Litton of Chillicothe won the Democratic U.S. Senate nomination, but was killed in a plane crash the night of the election. Hearnes, who placed second in the race, was selected by the Democratic State Committee as Litton's successor.

It will be an uphill battle against Republican Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth, whose campaign committee reported $94,451 still on hand for the general election. Danforth had token opposition in the GOP Senate primary, spending $340,518.

Hearnes tapped all his resources in the three-way Democratic Senate primary, spending $337,490 of the $337,512 he had available to him.

Hiss financial situation and Danforth's promise to limit his spending to the limits of a court-overturned federal campaign law, seem to indicate the money will not flow as heavily in Missouri's general election as it did in the primary for the Senate.

Litton spent more than $1 million in his successful bid for the nomination against Hearnes and U.S. Rep. James Symington of St. Louis County.

According to the campaign reports, he spent $1,057,913 in the campaign, with $563,150 in bank loans guaranteed by Litton, accounting for most of Litton's campaign debt of $686,649.

At the start of the primary campaign, Litton had promised to spend large sums of money to get his name as well known statewide as that of Hearnes and Symington, who was trying to succeed his retiring father, Sen. Stuart Symington.

Symington spent $548,827 in the race, but placed third. Of that amount, $135,000 came from personal funds and another $75,000 came from a bank loan guaranteed by him.

Kansas City Mayor Charles Wheeler, who also sought the party's Senate nomination, collected and spent $45,362 in his campaign.

Kansas City lawyer Joe Teasdale's successful bid for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination cost his campaign only $123,768 while loser state Sen. William Cason spent $321,409.

Incumbent Republican Gov. Christopher S. Bond, who was unopposed in the primary, spent $232,550.

Bond proposes new measures law

By JIM KELLER
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — Although Missouri retailers say there is no problem with the state's existing weights and measures law, Gov. Christopher S. Bond has proposed that the legislature adopt a new statute to cover electronic measuring devices not covered under present law.

Bond recently recommended that Missouri update its 1969 law by adopting a federal model law developed in 1973 by the U.S. Department of Commerce.

If the state legislature adopts a new standard for weights and measures, Missouri will join more than one-half of the other states in this country.

"With the new law, the (Missouri) Department of Agriculture will have a new ability to administer weights and measures laws for modern equipment which now cannot be regulated. This will have an impact on a wide range of scales, from those used to weight livestock and grain to those at the checkout lines at the grocery store," Bond says.

Since the National Conference on Weights and Measures published a pamphlet detailing the model, at least 30 states have adopted the proposal, says J. W. Abbott, director of the Missouri Department of Agriculture. "I think that eventually all fifty states will adopt it," Abbott says.

The Department of Agriculture has been working on a new statute since shortly before the close of the last General Assembly. The legislation will be introduced in January when the General Assembly again convenes.

Under Missouri's present statute, Abbott says, federal standards cannot be applied to state law. He says that existing law does not cover the use of digital electronic scales, universal product code scanner systems and other measuring innovations made since 1969.

When products from other states are sent to Missouri, Abbott says, there are sometimes discrepancies in volume and weight because each state applies its own standard. Problems with the weighing and measuring of interstate trade have encouraged state legislatures to adopt the same standards.

Adoption of the model statute also will eliminate archaic parts of the state's weight previous laws, Abbott says.

The dimensions of a brick and the use of county clerks by the department are two examples of outdated passages, he says.

While Bond and Abbott are eager to revise Missouri's law, officers from retail and grocery store associations observe no major problem with the existing law. They question the need for new legislation.

"We hope that any legislation of new equipment like our electronic scanners won't prohibit our companies from experimenting with the UPC (unit pricing control)," says Sam Overfelt, president of Missouri Retailers Association. "We will have to review each piece of legislation as it comes down the line before we could endorse it."

George Dillard, secretary of Missouri Retail Grocers' Association, says no major problems have resulted from the existing legislation. "Right now we have two scanners in St. Louis and one or two scanners in Kansas City. If there are any problems with the existing law and these new machines, I'm not familiar with them," he says.

Provided the companies comply with federal standards set forth in the state model, a new weights and measures system will not restrict the use of innovative equipment. Scanners and other machines now being used in several Missouri grocery stores will meet the federal standards in the model law, Abbott says.

He adds that consumers will benefit from a model law. "When that customer walks out of that store, it is important that he has a properly weighed and measured package. The model statute will help to ensure this," he says.

No. 1 Continued from page 1

provided only he and one person from Concerned Citizens did the debating.

The debate is set for next Tuesday on Channel 6 of See-Mor Cable TV.

Dempster also ruled out the provision for a panel of newsmen to ask the questions to be debated and a moderator to guide the debate.

"You have not asked for a debate -- you simply want a press conference," Dempster said.

Dempster listed his provisions for the debate: "You may select any person you desire to present the aspects of the City Manager form of Government. Your organization, through whomever they choose, can present your side and I will then present the side of the people whom I represent. We then can have a short rebuttal."

Dempster said he wanted the rules of debate to be strictly followed.

But Norton said that is not how a debate works.

"All he wants," Norton said, "is to make a speech and then have a short rebuttal."

Norton said Concerned Citizens would have three people present. If Dempster wanted to present his side by himself, he could, Norton added.

But the news media asking the questions is a feature which must stay, Norton said. The news media will be the ones to present the issues to be debated, he said.

He added that he would write a letter to Dempster today to try and work out the differences. He said he was confident the debates would go on as scheduled.

Some people believe that a knife, given as a gift, will cut the friendship.

Lambert suit to be filed in Washington

BRIDGETON, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri-St. Louis Airport Authority was expected to file a suit in Washington today to overturn a federal decision to build a new St. Louis airport in Illinois.

A week ago U.S. Transportation Secretary William T. Coleman Jr. recommended that a new airport begin operation in the Columbia-Waterloo area in 1992.

The Missouri authority has been fighting to maintain Lambert St. Louis International Airport in St. Louis County as the area's primary commercial airport.

It maintains that Section 16(f)(1) of the Airport and Airway Development Act of 1976, as amended, prohibits the transportation secretary from granting an application for an airport site that is opposed by the overwhelming majority of area residents.

The suit disputes Coleman's claim that he gave fair consideration to the interests of local communities, citing a 1972 referendum and a 1975 opinion poll strongly backing retention of Lambert.

Stubbs criticized Coleman's suggestion that a new airport authority have equal representation from both Illinois and Missouri.

"Missouri, with the vast majority of St. Louis area people and air travelers, should also have the majority of seats on such an authority," Stubbs said.

Manager sought for overseas office

By LAURA PATRICK
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — After a three-year delay in legislative funding, an overseas office to represent Missouri in the international business community is scheduled to open in November.

A location for the office has not been determined, but the state's commerce and industry division plans to recruit the office's manager applicants through advertisements placed in major U.S. and European newspapers.

"We'd like to have an office leased and a person on the job by Nov. 1," said Don Estell, division director. The office will be staffed by one manager and one clerk assistant.

The office will be an extension of the state Division of Commerce and Industrial Development, which now promotes Missouri to U.S. business and industry.

Goals for the foreign office, Estell said, are to help Missouri farmers and "medium-sized manufacturers" find new markets overseas, encourage foreign companies to locate in the state and promote the tourism industry.

A task force of Missouri business and agricultural leaders with international expertise will meet Sept. 23 to choose among three possible locations for the office: Dusseldorf, West Germany; Luxembourg and Zurich, Switzerland.

The home of the Common Market, Brussels, Belgium, has been dropped from consideration, Estell said.

Voters ignore reprimand

By DAVE GOLDBERG
Associated Press Writer

The voters in Florida's Panhandle have apparently decided that a reprimand by Congress isn't enough to make them unseat their long-time congressman, Robert L.F. Sikes.

Sikes, whose colleagues voted the reprimand in July after allegations that he had benefitted financially from his congressional activities, won renomination Tuesday by a 3-1 margin in the Democratic primary in his northwest Florida district over John Benton Jr., a political newcomer. Sikes, 70, has no Republican opposition in November as he seeks his 19th term in the House.

There were four primaries in all on Tuesday, with the principal action in Arizona and Florida.

John Rhodes, the House Republican leader, was renominated easily in in Arizona, and so was Rep. Morris K. Udall, who spent last spring seeking the Democratic presidential nomination.

In another Arizona race, a battle of two conservative congressmen ended with Sam Steiger narrowly defeating John Conlan for the Republican nomination to succeed Sen. Paul Fannin, a Republican who is not seeking renomination. The three-way Democratic race was won by Dennis DeConcini, a former Pima County attorney.

In a Florida contest to determine the GOP nominee against Democratic Sen. Lawton Chiles, the winner was Dr. John Grady, a John Birch Society member who had run previously on the American party ticket.

Sikes, who has been in Congress since 1941, is chairman of the House subcommittee on military construction appropriations.

He was reprimanded for buying 2,500 shares of stock in the First Navy Bank, which he used his office to help establish, and for failing to report to the House the bank stock and 1,000 shares of Fairchild Industry, a defense contractor.

Benton, 26, had resigned his post with the U.S Commerce Department and entered the race just before the filing deadline. He said at the time, "I was very angry that Sikes took it upon himself to run even after he was reprimanded."

Floridians also elected their first black ever to statewide office. He is Joseph Hatchett, who was elected to the state Supreme Court post to which he had been appointed last year.

There were also primaries Tuesday in North Dakota and Connecticut.

In North Dakota, Richard Elkin, president of the state Public Service Commission, easily won the Republican nomination for governor. He will face Democratic incumbent Arthur A. Link, who was unopposed.

In Connecticut, the only race was for a Democratic congressional nomination. There, Geoffrey Peterson, a 30-year-old former aide to Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, defeated Charles B. Tisdale, who had been endorsed by the party organization.

Peterson will face Republican Rep. Stewart McKinney, who was unopposed for renomination.

Head Start enrollment scheduled

CANALOU — Head Start enrollment will be held Thursday and Friday from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the old Canalou grade school building for children ages 3 through 5. Parents are asked to bring immunization records and birth certificates for the children and social security numbers for both parents.

ESSEX — Richland Head Start enrollment for three to five- year- olds will be 8 a.m. to noon Thursday at the Richland Center in Gray Ridge.

Parents should bring birth certificates, social security numbers and verification of income.

Q. Have there been too many speeding tickets and high weed notices given under the Council Manager form of government?

A. City ordinances should be enforced because the majority of Sikeston's citizens want them enforced. If tickets and notices are given without favor to anyone, it shows that the system is working--not that it should be changed.

Services were held today at the Rainey Funeral Home with the Rev. Clifford Wray, pastor of the First General Baptist Church, officiating.

Burial will be in the Piggott Cemetery at Piggott, Ark.

Proposed gas plant center of debate

BERNIE — Threat of terrorist activity was a spectre raised by citizens Tuesday night at a city council meeting in arguments against the location of a proposed gas plant on property owned by the Bernie School District.

"There are some nuts in this town right now who would take delight in blowing it up," Judy Perkins told the council almost tearfully.

It seemed most of the nearly twenty persons standing in the city administration building agreed with her comments. "Good for you," one said under her breath.

"We are talking about tying up this ground for 99 years risking an explosion so you can sleep at night" Mrs. Perkins said.

She was just one of a number of citizens speaking out against the proposed location of the plant.

Another woman Peggy Causey asked "You wouldn't mind sending your children to the school knowing some nut could blow it up? If some nut blows it up will you be willing to come to the funeral?"

The gas peak shaving system uses propane gas which will be mixed with the city's natural gas to insure an adequate supply of fuel during cold winters, but both Mayor R.B. Woods and the city engineer Randy Thomas of St. Louis said the system is safe.

Thomas had selected 8 possible sites to put the gas plant. He said Tuesday night that safety was not a factor in the choice since "it would be safe wherever you put it."

Woods explained that of the eight sites none were for sale and the city did not want to go the route of using eminent domain.

"The only alternate we have is condemning an old woman's ground" Wood said.

It was pointed out that the other sites are also near the school and if the city is forced to use eminent domain the plant will not be ready for this winter.

Guy Perkins who owns a home in the area where the plant is planned to be built, brought up a danger of an accident; "Given 99 years I contend there will be an accident. These fittings can go and if it does and the gas drifts towards the school or my home, what will the result be?"

The city has signed a lease with the board of education for 99 years, but the council has not decided to place the gas system on the property.

Woods said a decision is expected at the councils next meeting of Sept. 20.

The discussion continued for almost two hours when Thomas volunteered to talk privately with the group. He brought the people to the library adjoining the council room to discuss the technical aspects of project.

Other action taken by the council last night at the meeting which lasted until about 11 p.m. included applying for a $400,000 block grant for a community building, elevated water storage system and a housing rehabilitation loan program.

Waters and Associates of Sikeston were retained to oversee the elvated storage project and Pat Donellan of Poplar Bluff an architect was retained to make the preliminary design on the community building.

Woods also appointed a committee to work with the architect to help decide what should go in the building.

The city should know if it will receive the grant by the first of the year Wood said.

In other action the council approved the updated comprehensive plan prepared by the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission; passed an ordinance relating to the city sewers spelling out what could and could not be put in the sewers; and appointed a committee to look into Cable television.

Hearnes starting campaign with $22

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Warren E. Hearnes is starting his campaign for the U.S. Senate with empty pockets. According to reports on file here Tuesday, the former Missouri governor has only $22 available to him from his campaign committee.

Hearns' report was one of several filed with the Campaign Reporting Division of the secretary of state's office. The reports account for money spent and received through Aug. 23 for candidates in the Aug. 3 primary election.

Congressman Jerry Litton of Chillicothe won the Democratic U.S. Senate nomination, but was killed in a plane crash the night of the election. Hearnes, who placed second in the race, was selected by the Democratic State Committee as Litton's successor.

It will be an uphill battle against Republican Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth, whose campaign committee reported $94,451 still on hand for the general election. Danforth had token opposition in the GOP Senate primary, spending $340,518.

Hearnes tapped all his resources in the three-way Democratic Senate primary, spending $337,490 of the $337,512 he had available to him.

Hiss financial situation and Danforth's promise to limit his spending to the limits of a court-overturned federal campaign law, seem to indicate the money will not flow as heavily in Missouri's general election as it did in the primary for the Senate.

Litton spent more than $1 million in his successful bid for the nomination against Hearnes and U.S. Rep. James Symington of St. Louis County.

According to the campaign reports, he spent $1,087,913 in the campaign, with $863,150 in bank loans guaranteed by Litton, accounting for most of Litton's campaign debt of $886,649.

At the start of the primary campaign, Litton had promised to spend large sums of money to get his name as well known statewide as that of Hearnes and Symington, who was trying to succeed his retiring father, Sen. Stuart Symington.

Symington spent $548,827 in the race, but placed third. Of that amount, $135,000 came from personal funds and another $75,000 came from a bank loan guaranteed by him.

Kansas City Mayor Charles Wheeler, who also sought the party's Senate nomination, collected and spent $45,362 in his campaign.

Kansas City lawyer Joe Teasdale's successful bid for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination cost his campaign only $123,768 while loser state Sen. William Cason spent $321,409.

Incumbent Republican Gov. Christopher S. Bond, who was unopposed in the primary, spent $232,550.

Bond proposes new measures law

By JIM KELLER
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — Although Missouri retailers say there is no problem with the state's existing weights and measures law, Gov. Christopher S. Bond has proposed that the legislature adopt a new statute to cover electronic measuring devices not covered under present law.

Bond recently recommended that Missouri update its 1969 law by adopting a federal model law developed in 1973 by the U.S. Department of Commerce.

If the state legislature adopts a new standard for weights and measures, Missouri will join more than one-half of the other states in this country.

"With the new law, the (Missouri) Department of Agriculture will have a new ability to administer weights and measures laws for modern equipment which now cannot be regulated. This will have an impact on a wide range of scales, from those used to weight livestock and grain to those at the checkout lines at the grocery store," Bond says.

Since the National Conference on Weights and Measures published a pamphlet detailing the model, at least 30 states have adopted the proposal, says J. W. Abbott, director of the Missouri Department of Agriculture. "I think that eventually all fifty states will adopt it," Abbott says.

The Department of Agriculture has been working on a new statute since shortly before the close of the last General Assembly. The legislation will be introduced in January when the General Assembly again convenes.

Under Missouri's present statute, Abbott says, federal standards cannot be applied to state law. He says that existing law does not cover the use of digital electronic scales, universal product code scanner systems and other measuring innovations made since 1969.

When products from other states are sent to Missouri, Abbott says, there are sometimes discrepancies in volume and weight because each state applies its own standard. Problems with the weighing and measuring of interstate trade have encouraged state legislatures to adopt the same standards.

Adoption of the model statute also will eliminate archaic parts of the state's weight previous laws, Abbott says.

The dimensions of a brick and the use of county clerks by the department are two examples of outdated passages, he says.

While Bond and Abbott are eager to revise Missouri's law, officers from retail and grocery store associations observe no major problem with the existing law. They question the need for new legislation.

"We hope that any legislation of new equipment like our electronic scanners won't prohibit our companies from experimenting with the UPC (unit pricing control)," says Sam Overfelt, president of Missouri Retailers Association. "We will have to review each piece of legislation as it comes down the line before we could endorse it."

George Dillard, secretary of Missouri Retail Grocers' Association, says no major problems have resulted from the existing legislation. "Right now we have two scanners in St. Louis and one or two scanners in Kansas City. If there are any problems with the existing law and these new machines, I'm not familiar with them," he says.

Provided the companies comply with federal standards set forth in the state model, a new weights and measures system will not restrict the use of innovative equipment. Scanners and other machines now being used in several Missouri grocery stores will meet the federal standards in the model law, Abbott says.

He adds that consumers will benefit from a model law. "When that customer walks out of that store, it is important that he has a properly weighed and measured package. The model statute will help to ensure this," he says.

provided only he and one person from Concerned Citizens did the debating.

The debate is set for next Tuesday on Channel 6 of See-Mor Cable TV.

Dempster also ruled out the provision for a panel of newsmen to ask the questions to be debated and a moderator to guide the debate.

"You have not asked for a debate -- you simply want a press conference," Dempster said.

Dempster listed his provisions for the debate: "You may select any person you desire to present the aspects of the City Manager form of Government. Your organization, through whomever they choose, can present your side and I will then present the side of the people whom I represent. We then can have a short rebuttal."

Dempster said he wanted the rules of debate to be strictly followed.

But Norton said that is not how a debate works.

"All he wants," Norton said, "is to make a speech and then have a short rebuttal."

Norton said Concerned Citizens would have three people present. If Dempster wanted to present his side by himself, he could, Norton added.

But the news media asking the questions is a feature which must stay, Norton said. The news media will be the ones to present the issues to be debated, he said.

He added that he would write a letter to Dempster today to try and work out the differences. He said he was confident the debates would go on as scheduled.

Manager sought for overseas office

By LAURA PATRICK
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — After a three-year delay in legislative funding, an overseas office to represent Missouri in the international business community is scheduled to open in November.

A location for the office has not been determined, but the state's commerce and industry division plans to recruit the office's manager applicants through advertisements placed in major U.S. and European newspapers.

"We'd like to have an office leased and a person on the job by Nov. 1," said Don Estell, division director. The office will be staffed by one manager and one clerk assistant.

The office will be an extension of the state Division of Commerce and Industrial Development, which now promotes Missouri to U.S. business and industry.

Goals for the foreign office, Estell said, are to help Missouri farmers and "medium-sized manufacturers" find new markets overseas, encourage foreign companies to locate in the state and promote the tourism industry.

A task force of Missouri business and agricultural leaders with international expertise will meet Sept. 23 to choose among three possible locations for the office: Dusseldorf, West Germany; Luxembourg and Zurich, Switzerland.

The home of the Common Market, Brussels, Belgium, has been dropped from consideration, Estell said.

Voters ignore reprimand

By DAVE GOLDBERG
Associated Press Writer

The voters in Florida's Panhandle have apparently decided that a reprimand by Congress isn't enough to make them unseat their long-time congressman, Robert L.F. Sikes.

Sikes, whose colleagues voted the reprimand in July after allegations that he had benefitted financially from his congressional activities, won renomination Tuesday by a 3-1 margin in the Democratic primary in his northwest Florida district over John Benton Jr., a political newcomer. Sikes, 70, has no Republican opposition in November as he seeks his 19th term in the House.

There were four primaries in all on Tuesday, with the principal action in Arizona and Florida.

John Rhodes, the House Republican leader, was renominated easily in in Arizona, and so was Rep. Morris K. Udall, who spent last spring seeking the Democratic presidential nomination.

In another Arizona race, a battle of two conservative congressmen ended with Sam Steiger narrowly defeating John Conlan for the Republican nomination to succeed Sen. Paul Fannin, a Republican who is not seeking renomination. The three-way Democratic race was won by Dennis DeConcini, a former Pima County attorney.

In a Florida contest to determine the GOP nominee against Democratic Sen. Lawton Chiles, the winner was Dr. John Grady, a John Birch Society member who had run previously on the American party ticket.

Sikes, who has been in Congress since 1941, is chairman of the House subcommittee on military construction appropriations.

He was reprimanded for buying 2,500 shares of stock in the First Navy Bank, which he used his office to help establish, and for failing to report to the House the bank stock and 1,000 shares of Fairchild Industry, a defense contractor.

Benton, 26, had resigned his post with the U.S Commerce Department and entered the race just before the filing deadline. He said at the time, "I was very angry that Sikes took it upon himself to run even after he was reprimanded."

Floridians also elected their first black ever to statewide office. He is Joseph Hatchett, who was elected to the state Supreme Court post to which he had been appointed last year.

There were also primaries Tuesday in North Dakota and Connecticut.

In North Dakota, Richard Elkin, president of the state Public Service Commission, easily won the Republican nomination for governor. He will face Democratic incumbent Arthur A. Link, who was unopposed.

In Connecticut, the only race was for a Democratic congressional nomination. There, Geoffrey Peterson, a 30-year-old former aide to Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, defeated Charles B. Tisdale, who had been endorsed by the party organization.

Lambert suit to be filed in Washington

BRIDGETON, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri-St. Louis Airport Authority was expected to file a suit in Washington today to overturn a federal decision to build a new St. Louis airport in Illinois.

The Missouri authority has been fighting to maintain Lambert St. Louis International Airport in St. Louis County as the area's primary commercial airport.

It maintains that Section 16(f)(1) of the Airport and Airway Development Act of 1976, as amended, prohibits the transportation secretary from granting an application for an airport site that is opposed by the overwhelming majority of area residents.

The suit disputes Coleman's claim that he gave fair consideration to the interests of local communities, citing a 1972 referendum and a 1975 opinion poll strongly backing retention of Lambert.

Stubbs criticized Coleman's suggestion that a new airport authority have equal representation from both Illinois and Missouri.

"Missouri, with the vast majority of St. Louis area people and air travelers, should also have the majority of seats on such an authority," Stubbs said.

Chaffee council discusses new city hall site

CHAFFEE — The passing of two ordinances and a discussion of real estate property to be used for a new city administration complex was the main order of business for the city council Tuesday night.

An ordinance setting a curfew for all youths age 17 and under to be off the street after 10 p.m. Sunday through Thursday nights and after midnight Friday and Saturday nights unless accompanied by their parents or legal guardians was approved after the final reading by the five members present.

Another ordinance authorizing a contract with Jack Holder of Illmo for trash hauling in the city received final approval. The contract will remain at $2.75 a month for the first year and allows raises the second and third year with the total amount in the two years not to exceed 25 cents.

Mayor Robert Capshaw in discussion about location of a new city administration complex said that a list of recommendations set out by the Missouri Municipal League in considering location of new city administration buildings suggested the location provide area for expansion, off-street parking, and be accessable from all directions.

Capshaw said that the recommendations in mind, there was only one site in the city that meets the criteria. That site is located diagonally across the street from the present city hall. Negotiations were conducted earlier in the year to purchase the property from Dewitt Harmon and C.J. Hindman, Capshaw said.

Whitaker told the council he had purchased the property for possibly developing a retail complex which is needed in the north end of the city and since he has only had the property about 2½ months he needed more time to consider the venture.

He said that he would be glad to meet with a committee after 30 days and set a target date at which time if the complex could not be developed he would negotiate a sale.

The city when negotiating with Harmon earlier had said that city could condemn the property.

In other business, police commission chairman Rev. James Murphy reported the commission had reduced Police Chief David Townsend and Sgt. Ray Olive to position of patrolmen with the pay scale to remain the same, however he said that this created problems and asked the council to set their pay as other patrolmen which is $575 a month. The council took the matter under advisement.

Olive then spoke saying that he waived a police commission hearing on the demotion and requested a hearing by the city council with his attorney and himself.

The council then set Sept. 13, as a hearing date.

However later in the meeting Olive sent a written statement saying that he would rather have the hearing by a police commission.

City Judge W.G. Vickery then addressed the council asking who would be considered acting chief of police to collect fines which are levied in the city court. He added that Wednesday would be court day.

The council responded that until a new police chief was named that Rev. Murphy as police commission chairman would direct work schedules and appoint an acting chief to the court.

Rev. Murphy said that former chief David Townsend was still in charge of administrative duties and would be acting chief of police for the collecting of fines in the court.

In committee reports Councilman Bill Whistler reported that representatives of See-Mor Cable TV of Sikeston, Tom Gleason, Travis Garrett, Jim Hux and David Shy, were present wishing to renew the franchise which had expired earlier this year.

Mayor Capshaw said that if the company wish to lower the cost of $7.50 per month for each user, negotiations could be conducted.

Whistler also presented a recommendation of the audit and finance committee at a 6 per-cent salary increase be given to permanent employes effective Oct. 1.

BENTON — A $40,000 suit for personal injuries and damages was filed Tuesday in Scott County Circuit Court by Erna Meesey and Signey Meesey against James Killen, doing business as Mr. K's Factory Outlet in Sikeston.

The suit alleges that prior to July 7 Killen carelessly and negligently permitted a door at the entrance of the store, which is set automatically, to close at a high rate of speed and with great force. On or about July 7, the suit states that Mrs. Meesey, a customer leaving the premises, was struck by the closing door and violently thrown forward, resulting in serious and permanent injuries.

As a result of carelessness and negligence on the part of Killen and the resultant fall, the suit claims Mrs. Meesey suffered permanent and disabling injuries to her right leg and right hip joint, as the ligaments, cartilages and muscles of her right leg were bruised, ruptured and sprained. It also alleges that a previously existing condition of acute interior poliomyelitis was aggravated and that she suffered cuts and bruises to her face and the dentures she was wearing were cracked.

The suit further states that, as a result of these injuries, she was required to seek medical attention and will in the future require medical attention at great expense, as well as suffering great pain, agony and loss of sleep.

In count one of the suit, Mrs. Meesey seeks $30,000 for injuries and costs incurred.

In count two, her husband Sidney realleges all allegations mentioned in count one and further claims the loss of compansionship, consortium and services of his wife, both now and in the future, and seeks $10,000 in damages.

U.S. forces back to 'normal alert'

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. forces in South Korea have been ordered "to return to a normal alert status" after 20 days on extra readiness following the slaying of two U.S. Army officers by North Korean guards in the Demilitarized Zone, the Pentagon said Tuesday.

Pentagon officials said 40 jet fighters and fighter-bombers sent to South Korea as reinforcements amid the crisis are remaining there.

At the same time, the Pentagon announced that other U.S. warplanes have been sent from Okinawa to bases in South Korea and elsewhere in the western Pacific to get out of the way of a typhoon heading for Okinawa.

The stand-down in the higher-than-normal alert of 42,000 American servicemen in South Korea followed agreement between the U.S.-led United Nations Command and North Korea on new arrangements designed to prevent a recurrence of the incident in which the two Army officers were slain while supervising a tree-trimming detail.

Madrid council names members of 2 panels

NEW MADRID — The City Council heard citizens requests, discussed park problems, appointed members to a city planning commission and a citizens advisory committee and handled other business Tuesday night.

Bill French, on behalf of the chamber of commerce pointed out to the board that sidewalks and curbs on Main Street in the downtown area were cracked and breaking and were in much need of repair. It was agreed to study the problem and have cost estimates made for consideration by the council.

Oryn Cartner told the council that there was a shortage of parking in the vicinity of his store. He suggested that the vacant area between the sidewalk and the street on Mill Street west of Main Street be removed and the street widened and parking space constructed. This too was taken under advisement and study.

Bobby LaValle, Edwin Riley and Bob Hedgepeth discussed sewage problems and requested underground electrical services for a new subdivision they are proposing on south Highway 61. The council pointed out that in the past in installing underground cable the city had only paid for the cost of overhead cable and the subdivider had paid the difference. A study was ordered for the required sewage connections and its cost.

Basketball boards were authorized to be reinstalled at the Mill Street Park and at O'Bannon School Park. They had been removed following several acts of vandalism. The city will offer a $100 reward to anyone who reports an act of vandalism when the vandal is convicted.

The council named new members to the city planning commission and established a citizens advisory committee. Named to the seven member planning commission were Mayor Jim Cravens, Ray Melton, Joe Baher, Don Lloyd, Theodis Maltbia, Dorothy Edwards and Larry Rost. Members of the advisory committee were Johnny Davis, Bill French, Mike Guess, Rance Perkins and Jay Patterson. Both groups will work with the council in planning and study of community improvements for requesting federal assistance through the Community Block Grant Program.

In other matters, the police department was ordered to crack down on littering of the streets; a warrant to the Bank of New Madrid for $78,565 was renewed; and repairs to the city's digger derrick truck were discussed. Estimated cost of the repairs for the truck were between $3,000 and $4,000 and a used truck in good repair is available for trade-in of the old truck and $4,500 difference. Administrator Don Lloyd was authorized to investigate and make his recommendations.

The council authorized application by the city to Farmers Home Administration for a loan to install water and sewer lines to the new factory building on route U about one mile west of Highway 61.

Administrator Lloyd advised that estimates to overhaul the lights and power plants, two best generating engines were $165,000 for the Worthington Engine and $45,000 for the Norberg Engine.

Lloyd also said eight additional houses had been posted for repair and demolition and that notices of the public hearing required by ordinance would be sent out soon.

A no-parking sign was authorized on Mott Street at the entrance to a parking lot on the corner of Main and Mott at the request of merchants who stated park cars were blocking the entrance.

Tools stolen

CHARLESTON — Police are investigating the theft of an electric saw, soldering iron, impact wrench and combination grinder and buffer valued at a total of $235.

The items were reported stolen sometime Tuesday night from the garage at the James Maxey home, 215 N. Heggie St.

Shells taken

Twenty- six boxes of shotgun shells and two vests with a total value of $83.14 were reported stolen from a car belonging to W. P. "Bill" Hunter, 226 Tanner St., sometime Saturday or Sunday, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Ditch work protested

DEXTER – Citizens in the Dexter Creek Sewer District, who are opposed to the work being done, will not give up.

Chester Hubbard, who owns property in the district, was at a City Council meeting Monday night protesting the setup in which cost of work done will be divided among the property owners, based on assesed valuation.

Hubbard apparently wanted his land exempted, but City Attorney Paul McGhee explained that the city could not exempt one property owner and not another, noting that Hubbard had signed an easement.

He left the meeting, still dissatisfied.

Also discussed at Monday night's meeting were the possibilities of eliminating parking on a part of South Locust Street and a traffic hazzard on Brown Pilot Road and Trotter Lane in which drivers cannot see over a hill.

No action was taken.

Other discussion centered on the possibility of the city handling misdemeanor cases involving possession of marijuana, so that the city could get some revenue from it.

McGhee said that it could be done, but advised that a careful study be made before taking any action.

Chaffee council discusses new city hall site

CHAFFEE — The passing of two ordinances and a discussion of real estate property to be used for a new city administration complex was the main order of business for the city council Tuesday night.

An ordinance setting a curfew for all youths age 17 and under to be off the street after 10 p.m. Sunday through Thursday nights and after midnight Friday and Saturday nights unless accompanied by their parents or legal guardians was approved after the final reading by the five members present.

Another ordinance authorizing a contract with Jack Holder of Illmo for trash hauling in the city received final approval. The contract will remain at $2.75 a month for the first year and allows raises the second and third year with the total amount in the two years not to exceed 25 cents.

Mayor Robert Capshaw in discussion about location of a new city administration complex said that a list of recommendations set out by the Missouri Municipal League in considering location of new city administration buildings suggested the location provide area for expansion, off-street parking, and be accessable from all directions.

Capshaw said that the recommendations in mind, there was only one site in the city that meets the criteria. That site is located diagonally across the street from the present city hall. Negotiations were conducted earlier in the year to purchase the property from Dewitt Harmon and C.J. Hindman, Capshaw said.

However the Harmon property was sold to Ron Whitaker, a retail merchant, who presently does not wish to sell.

Whitaker told the council he had purchased the property for possibly developing a retail complex which is needed in the north end of the city and since he has only had the property about 2½ months he needed more time to consider the venture.

He said that he would be glad to meet with a committee after 30 days and set a target date at which time if the complex could not be developed he would negotiate a sale.

The city when negotiating with Harmon earlier had said that city could condemn the property.

In other business, police commission chairman Rev. James Murphy reported the commission had reduced Police Chief David Townsend and Sgt. Ray Olive to position of patrolmen with the pay scale to remain the same, however he said that this created problems and asked the council to set their pay as other patrolmen which is $575 a month. The council took the matter under advisement.

Olive then spoke saying that he waived a police commission hearing on the demotion and requested a hearing by the city council with his attorney and himself.

The council then set Sept. 13, as a hearing date.

However later in the meeting Olive sent a written statement saying that he would rather have the hearing by a police commission.

City Judge W.G. Vickery then addressed the council asking who would be considered acting chief of police to collect fines which are levied in the city court. He added that Wednesday would be court day.

The council responded that until a new police chief was named that Rev. Murphy as police commission chairman would direct work schedules and appoint an acting chief to the court.

Rev. Murphy said that former chief David Townsend was still in charge of administrative duties and would be acting chief of police for the collecting of fines in the court.

In committee reports Councilman Bill Whistler reported that representatives of See-Mor Cable TV of Sikeston, Tom Gleason, Travis Garrett, Jim Hux and David Shy, were present wishing to renew the franchise which had expired earlier this year.

Mayor Capshaw said that if the company wish to lower the cost of $7.50 per month for each user, negotiations could be conducted.

Whistler also presented a recommendation of the audit and finance committee at a 6 per-cent salary increase be given to permanent employes effective Oct. 1.

The council then decided to table the recommendation until the next meeting Sept. 20.

$40,000 damage suit filed

BENTON — A $40,000 suit for personal injuries and damages was filed Tuesday in Scott County Circuit Court by Erna Meesey and Signey Meesey against James Killen, doing business as Mr. K's Factory Outlet in Sikeston.

The suit alleges that prior to July 7 Killen carelessly and negligently permitted a door at the entrance of the store, which is set automatically, to close at a high rate of speed and with great force. On or about July 7, the suit states that Mrs. Meesey, a customer leaving the premises, was struck by the closing door and violently thrown forward, resulting in serious and permanent injuries.

As a result of carelessness and negligence on the part of Killen and the resultant fall, the suit claims Mrs. Meesey suffered permanent and disabling injuries to her right leg and right hip joint, as the ligaments, cartilages and muscles of her right leg were bruised, ruptured and sprained. It also alleges that a previously existing condition of acute interior poliomyelitis was aggravated and that she suffered cuts and bruises to her face and the dentures she was wearing were cracked.

The suit further states that, as a result of these injuries, she was required to seek medical attention and will in the future require medical attention at great expense, as well as suffering great pain, agony and loss of sleep.

In count one of the suit, Mrs. Meesey seeks $30,000 for injuries and costs incurred.

In count two, her husband Sidney realleges all allegations mentioned in count one and further claims the loss of compansionship, consortium and services of his wife, both now and in the future, and seeks $10,000 in damages.

U.S. forces back to 'normal alert'

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. forces in South Korea have been ordered "to return to a normal alert status" after 20 days on extra readiness following the slaying of two U.S. Army officers by North Korean guards in the Demilitarized Zone, the Pentagon said Tuesday.

Pentagon officials said 40 jet fighters and fighter-bombers sent to South Korea as reinforcements amid the crisis are remaining there.

At the same time, the Pentagon announced that other U.S. warplanes have been sent from Okinawa to bases in South Korea and elsewhere in the western Pacific to get out of the way of a typhoon heading for Okinawa.

The stand-down in the higher-than-normal alert of 42,000 American servicemen in South Korea followed agreement between the U.S.-led United Nations Command and North Korea on new arrangements designed to prevent a recurrence of the incident in which the two Army officers were slain while supervising a tree-trimming detail.

The Niger River in West Africa drains a basin of 430,000 square miles, an area almost twice as large as Texas.

Ditch work protested

DEXTER – Citizens in the Dexter Creek Sewer District, who are opposed to the work being done, will not give up.

Chester Hubbard, who owns property in the district, was at a City Council meeting Monday night protesting the setup in which cost of work done will be divided among the property owners, based on assesed valuation.

Hubbard apparently wanted his land exempted, but City Attorney Paul McGhee explained that the city could not exempt one property owner and not another, noting that Hubbard had signed an easement.

He left the meeting, still dissatisfied.

Also discussed at Monday night's meeting were the possibilities of eliminating parking on a part of South Locust Street and a traffic hazzard on Brown Pilot Road and Trotter Lane in which drivers cannot see over a hill.

No action was taken.

Other discussion centered on the possibility of the city handling misdemeanor cases involving possession of marijuana, so that the city could get some revenue from it.

McGhee said that it could be done, but advised that a careful study be made before taking any action.

Tools stolen

CHARLESTON — Police are investigating the theft of an electric saw, soldering iron, impact wrench and combination grinder and buffer valued at a total of $235.

The items were reported stolen sometime Tuesday night from the garage at the James Maxey home, 215 N. Heggie St.

Shells taken

Twenty- six boxes of shotgun shells and two vests with a total value of $83.14 were reported stolen from a car belonging to W. P. "Bill" Hunter, 226 Tanner St., sometime Saturday or Sunday, according to the Department of Public Safety.

The car was parked at the Hunter home when the theft occurred.

Madrid council names members of 2 panels

NEW MADRID — The City Council heard citizens requests, discussed park problems, appointed members to a city planning commission and a citizens advisory committee and handled other business Tuesday night.

Bill French, on behalf of the chamber of commerce pointed out to the board that sidewalks and curbs on Main Street in the downtown area were cracked and breaking and were in much need of repair. It was agreed to study the problem and have cost estimates made for consideration by the council.

Oryn Cartner told the council that there was a shortage of parking in the vicinity of his store. He suggested that the vacant area between the sidewalk and the street on Mill Street west of Main Street be removed and the street widened and parking space constructed. This too was taken under advisement and study.

Bobby LaValle, Edwin Riley and Bob Hedgepeth discussed sewage problems and requested underground electrical services for a new subdivision they are proposing on south Highway 61. The council pointed out that in the past in installing underground cable the city had only paid for the cost of overhead cable and the subdivider had paid the difference. A study was ordered for the required sewage connections and its cost.

Basketball boards were authorized to be reinstalled at the Mill Street Park and at O'Bannon School Park. They had been removed following several acts of vandalism. The city will offer a $100 reward to anyone who reports an act of vandalism when the vandal is convicted.

The council named new members to the city planning commission and established a citizens advisory committee. Named to the seven member planning commission were Mayor Jim Cravens, Ray Melton, Joe Baher, Don Lloyd, Theodis Maltbia, Dorothy Edwards and Larry Rost. Members of the advisory committee were Johnny Davis, Bill French, Mike Guess, Rance Perkins and Jay Patterson. Both groups will work with the council in planning and study of community improvements for requesting federal assistance through the Community Block Grant Program.

In other matters, the police department was ordered to crack down on littering of the streets; a warrant to the Bank of New Madrid for $78,565 was renewed; and repairs to the city's digger derrick truck were discussed. Estimated cost of the repairs for the truck were between $3,000 and $4,000 and a used truck in good repair is available for trade-in of the old truck and $4,500 difference. Administrator Don Lloyd was authorized to investigate and make his recommendations.

The council authorized application by the city to Farmers Home Administration for a loan to install water and sewer lines to the new factory building on route U about one mile west of Highway 61.

Administrator Lloyd advised that estimates to overhaul the lights and power plants, two best generating engines were $165,000 for the Worthington Engine and $45,000 for the Norberg Engine.

Lloyd also said eight additional houses had been posted for repair and demolition and that notices of the public hearing required by ordinance would be sent out soon.

A no-parking sign was authorized on Mott Street at the entrance to a parking lot on the corner of Main and Mott at the request of merchants who stated park cars were blocking the entrance.

Defector to get U.S. asylum

TOKYO (AP) — The Soviet air force pilot who landed his MIG25 fighter jet in northern Japan will leave for the United States in a day or two unless some unexpected development delays his departure, a Foreign Ministry spokesman said today.

The flier, Lt. Viktor I. Belenko, 29, told police after his surprise landing Monday that he wanted asylum in the United States. The U.S. Embassy declined to comment, but White House press secretary Ron Nessen told reporters in Washington: "If the pilot requests asylum in the United States, I'm sure he will be welcomed here."

Washington sources reported that U.S. experts were making a thorough examination of Belenko's plane, but the Japanese spokesman denied this. "As far as I know, no foreigners have touched the aircraft," he said.

The Soviet Embassy said it lodged "more than five protests" because the Japanese government would not let it see Belenko.

The Soviet Union demanded that both the pilot and the plane be returned. The Japanese Foreign Ministry said the Soviet Embassy's request to interview Belenko had been denied, and the government took the "humanitarian view" that his rquest for asylum should be honored. But it was expected that the plane would be given back after American and Japanese experts learned all they could from it.

The MIG25 was still at the commercial airport at Hakodate, on Japan's northernmost island, where Belenko landed. U.S. military sources in Washington said American intelligence specialists are going over it thoroughly. An intelligence bonanza was expected from the inspection.

Officially, however, the U.S. and Japanese governments refused to say that the Americans were inspecting the plane. Sources in Washington indicated the U.S. government was trying to spare the Japanese diplomatic difficulties with the Soviet Union.

The plane, caled the Foxbat, can fly at more than 2,000 miles an hour at 80,000 feet and is faster than the fastest American interceptor, the F15 Eagle. Although U.S. Air Force experts contend that the F15 is more maneuverable, Air Force Secretary Robert Seamans in 1973 said the MIG 25 was "probably the best interceptor in production in the world" at the time.

St. Louis Symphony is on strike

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Members of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra went on strike today in a dispute over pay increases. Their first concert of the season was canceled.

Pickets in concert dress were set up at Powell Hall, the orchestra's home, where several musicians formed a small combo to entertain fellow workers on the picket line.

Negotiators for the members, who are represented by Musicians Local 2-197, and the Symphony Society were to meet with federal mediators later today.

The first concert of the season was to have been held tonight. The status of two other concerts scheduled later this week was in doubt.

The 97 members of the symphony had received a base pay of $305 a week under the old contract. They are seeking a new contract calling for a base pay of $365 the first year, $425 the second and $485 in the third.

The orchestra management has offered a $10 a week raise to $315 in the first year, $330 in the second and $350 in the third. Members of the Symphony Society said they offered the modest wage increases because the society is deeply in debt and projects a net loss of $583,000 for the coming year.

This would bring the society's accumulated net deficit to almost $1.5 million.

Orchestra members are also seeking changes in work rules.

Mexico to parole 200 from U.S.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — President Luis Echeverria of Mexico has told U.S. officials that at least 200 U.S. citizens in Mexican prisons may be released on parole as early as November, a source close to the president said Tuesday.

The release of prisoners depends on approval by the Mexican congress of two bills submitted by Echeverria granting parole for the first time to drug offenders and allowing exchange of prisoners with other countries. Action on the proposal is expected in late October.

Mexican law now provides for release on parole of all prisoners except those charged with crimes against public health — drug offenses. Most of the 500 Americans now jailed in Mexico are being detained on drug charges.

Echeverria, here to inaugurate the 5th annual Mexican trade fair, explained his proposed laws to Texas and U.S. officials at private meetings, a presidential spokesman said.

In Washington, the State Department characterized Echeverria's proposals Tuesday as "promising." A spokesman said details such as parole eligibility have not yet been worked out. One official said the new laws would probably let persons jailed for state and local as well as federal offenses in Mexico but not those guilty of infractions involving brief jail terms. Most drug law violations carry sentences of 6 to 14 years.

The new laws would be effective within days of approval by the Mexican congress, the source said, and would benefit both Mexican and foreign prisoners. The source said about 200 Americans in Mexican prisons would be immediately eligible for parole.

Under the exchange of prisoners provision of the proposed laws, about 1,000 Mexicans jailed in this country could be exchanged for Americans jailed in Mexico.

"Depending on the negotiations between the two countries," the source said, "the prisoners could then serve their time in their own countries, close to their homes and families."

Echeverria arrived in San Antonio Tuesday afternoon to formally open Mexfair 76, the largest display of Mexican products on foreign soil. A presidential spokesman said the trade fair will be "our first test following the floating of the peso in the world market."

Accompanied by his wife and a group of high-ranking Mexican officials for a two-day visit, Echeverria attended a luncheon at a downtown hotel before heading for Mexfair 76.

Light side

JONESBORO, Ark. (AP) — It's against the law to sell liquor in this northeast Arkansas city of 30,000, but the city is putting 1,017 cans of beer and 75 pints of whiskey on the auction block.

The city isn't in the business of selling booze, and Mayor Neil Stallings, who says he's "a teetotaler," would like to take the stuff to the city dump and bury it.

That won't work, though, under state law.

The liquor was confiscated in a raid, thus the city has to sell it to the highest bidder among wholesale and retail liquor distributors.

"We don't have any choice but to sell it, according to state law, and that's the way it's going to be," the mayor said.

Jonesboro, in a dry county where liquor sales are banned by local option, is advertising for bids.

The liquor will bring about $700.

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — One of Mother Nature's industrious workers apparently decided not to take Labor Day off, and his work cut electrical power to 600 homes.

Iowa Power and Light Co. officials said that a beaver gnawed down a tree that fell across power lines in southern Des Moines early Monday.

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — State Lottery Director Gus Harrison says a new instant lottery game beginning next Tuesday will help get out the vote on Nov. 2.

The top prize in the game will be $1 for every vote cast for the winning presidential candidate in Michigan, and is guaranteed to be at least $1.25 million, the biggest prize ever awarded in the Michigan lottery.

Blassie wants investigation of prison system

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The chairman of a joint legislative committee on corrections says he wants to hire a special investigator for the panel to look into allegation of improper activities in the prison system.

Rep. John Blassie, D-St. Louis, said on Tuesday the committee needed such an investigator because there was no independent way to prove or disprove reports of questionable activities within the system.

Meanwhile, state corrections officials told the panel they would seek emergency funds next January to implement "short-range" solutions to prison overcrowding.

George Camp, deputy director of the Department of Social Services, agreed with committee members that immediate steps to alleviate overcrowding must be taken while plans go forward for new medium security prisons.

"New prisons are only a long-range solution," Camp told the House Senate panel. "The Divison of Corrections is not sitting back and waiting for something to happen."

Noting that new prison facilities proposed now could not be populated until 1980 at the earliest, Camp said the division is looking into remodeling of present prison facilities, expanded use of probation and half-way houses and new programs that would prepare inmates for earlier release as ways to cut overcrowding. Last month the system hit an all-time high population of more than 4,700.

Blassie, during a hearing that covered a wide range of issues involving the prison system, cited a number of alleged instances of questionable activity, including the loss in June of about 11,000 pounds of beef.

State Corrections Director Edward Haynes acknowledged a quantity of beef had been lost, but he said he did not know the exaxt amount or its value.

Haynes, who declined to identify the person responsible for the loss but said he was still employed by the state, said the meat was discovered spoiled when it was delivered to the Training Center for Men at Moberly from the main prison here, where it had been butchered.

He gave no explanation of how the meat could have spoiled other than to say the main prison does not have the proper facilities to properly process the meat. He said it was the first time such a loss had been incurred.

Blassie also claimed he had been told that drugs were being smuggled into the main prison by way of the women's restroom on visting days, but he gave no specific details on that allegation.

Camp, who has overall authority for the corrections system, said he would follow up on that possibility, but needed more information.

Camp completely discounted a third claim by Blassie that certain prison inmates receive special treatment and privileges in return for acting as "professional snitches" on fellow inmates.

Blassie said he wanted to hire a private investigator because lawmakers and other officials do not see such things when they tour the prisons or are not told of their existence. Camp said if the committee wanted an investigator that was its decision, but he claimed nothing was being hidden from lawmakers.

The Tuesday session was called primarily for the committee to obtain testimony on the state's latest attempt to find a location for a medium security prison in western Missouri. A site in southern Kansas City was abandoned last week because of overwhelming community opposition.

But he said any location will evoke opposition from some persons and it will take the action of a newly-formed coalition of Kansas City officials and leaders to pave the way to full community acceptance of whatever site is eventually selected.

He declined to comment on the possibility that the state would lose $75,000 in earnest money it had placed on the south Kansas City site because the plan had been abandoned, saying the matter was in the hands of attorneys.

But he said he welcomed the help of members of the committee in both selecting a site in Kansas City and of chosing a location in St. Louis for a duplicate facility proposed for the eastern side of the state.

ARC to sell appointment calendars

DEXTER — Appointment calendars, produced by the National Association for Retarded Citizens, are now on sale, Shirlene Stubbs, publicity chairman for the Stoddard County Association for Retarded Citizens, has announced.

The calendars emphasize the need for realization of civil rights of mentally retarded people in a salute to the Bicentennial, Mrs. Stubbs said.

The colorful illustrations in the calendars were drawn by mentally retarded children and adults selected thoughout a nationwide art contest.

Proceeds from the calendar will help provide community-based educational, vocational and recreational opportunities for mentally retarded children and adults, Mrs. Stubbs said, pointing out that there are over six million of them in the nation.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is another installment of a novel, "Sticks and Stones May Break Your Bones," by Cherie Blanton. The installments appear in the paper each Wednesday.

SUMMARY

Last week found Troy and Stacy planning her wedding. They decided to give the couple a wedding in the old conservatory as a present and they are busily making arrangements when Sheriff Ames drives up and tells them that Old Annie has been found dead.

By CHERIE BLANTON

The news of Annie's death had placed a damper on the high spirits of everyone at the farm. They had known the old woman all their lives, and as she was so fond of telling, she had even helped to bring Miss Troy into this world.

As soon as possible, Sam and Troy packed a basket of food and went to Old Annie's to see what they could do; however, no one was there for Luke had made the trip back into the hills to tell his father and Annie's other sons what had happened. The Sheriff returned with the local doctor while the women were still there, and after much discussion one way and the other, Michael was finally forced to agree with them all, that Annie must have suffered a fainting spell, fallen, and struck her temple on the edge of the old iron stove she cooked with.

After all, what would be the point of killing an old lady unless you wanted to rob her, and though there was a fresh scratch on her arm that bothered Michael, she could have easily done that herself earlier in the morning. Nothing looked as though it had been taken or disturbed, and anyway, what would she have had that would be worth killing for—only some moonshine, and she was known to be more than generous with her credit if you didn't have the money for a bottle right then.

They took Annie's pitifully small form away, and Troy and Sam tidied up the breakfast dishes which she hadn't gotten around to doing, did what little straightening up was required, and waited for the men to come home. They didn't want them to have to walk into their mother's place and no one be there, and Michael must have felt the same way, because just before the sons of Annie came home, he returned to the cabin. Finding the two women still there, he sat down at the table with them to wait.

"I'll make some tea." Sam rose, went to the sink and begin to pump water into the teapot that was always sitting on Annie's stove.

"She had a feeling something was going to happen," Troy informed him, "she told me the other day that she had been reading the leaves and she didn't like what she saw in them."

"Do you believe in fortune telling?" asked Michael.

"A little," she replied, "when I was growing up Annie told me a lot of times things that were going to happen—like getting sick, or taking a trip. She even told me the week before I met Edward that she knew the man I loved was soon to enter my life." She thought a moment, "I don't know if she really saw those happenings in the tea leaves or not, but I think in some odd way she did have feelings about events that were about to take place in people's lives. Why she even read the leaves for Louise the day she came over here with me."

"What did she tell her?" Sam asked.

"I don't know," Troy answered, "she sent Luke and me out to the car, and when I asked Louise about it later, she said she was afraid if she told me it wouldn't come true."

"What's that?" cried Michael suddenly alert to a small noise, "You all keep on talking normally, and I'm going to slip out the door and around to the back."

Troy and Sam looked at each other puzzled, and then Sam said, "I wonder when they'll have the funeral?"

"Probably tomorrow afternoon," reasoned Troy, "I think all the family she has lives right here."

Suddenly there was a loud commotion heard coming from the back of the cabin, and the girls both rushed toward the noise, just as the Sheriff came around the side of the building leading Randy Weaks.

"There you are, you lazy good-for-nothing!" Sam spat out to the amazement of the others, "We left you to do that fence and spray those cattle and the minute we turned our back you must have taken off." She faced Michael, "Now that means I have to help do that job and dern, but I hate that more than anything." Wheeling back on Randy she demanded, "where did you get off to anyway?"

"The very question I was going to ask him myself." said the Sheriff, "Where did you go Randy?"

He looked at all three of them and then staggering slightly, it was quite obvious he was very drunk, whined, "Miss Sam it's hot today and that dustin those cattle makes a man thirsty. I came up here to get me a little something to keep my tongue from being so dry."

"You hadn't touched those cattle," Sam advanced towards him furiously, "so how could you be thirsty?"

"Oh no, you won't." Michael held him by the collar of his shirt. "You aren't going anywhere till you and I have had a talk."

"What about, Sheriff? I ain't done nothing."

"You can say that again!" snorted Sam.

"I told you Sheriff," he whined, "I came for some moonshine, I was getting a powerful thirst."

"Randy," spoke up Troy, "where did you get the money to pay for the liquor? Jo hasn't paid you your week's wages yet."

"Don't matter none," he answered defiantly, "Annie always gives me credit. She knows I'll pay her soon as I get the money." He shifted his feet from side to side uneasily. "What are you all doing here asking me those questions? Why don't you ask Old Annie—she'll tell you."

"Annie's dead," announced the Sheriff, "and I wouldn't put it past you to have hit her in the head so you could steal some liquor."

"Never—never!" he cried cowering in front of the three of them, "I never would do nothing like that to Annie. She was my friend." Suddenly he began to cry and blubber like all drunks are prone to do. "She was my friend—I didn't do that to her Sheriff, honest."

"I believe him, Sir," Luke walked quietly up behind them, "Granny always gave Randy moonshine whenever he couldn't pay for it, and then he'd pay her later. He talked a lot to her too, and she listened to him just like she did to everybody that came around. He lowered his head, his eyes filling, "I don't believe he'd harm her none Sheriff, fact of the matter is I don't know anybody didn't love my Granny. I guess she was so old, she just gave out and when she fell she hit her head just right." He sighed, "When I was little and would come for a visit she used to carry the firewood in to burn in that stove and she'd say, 'Someday this old stove is gonna be the death of me boy.'--well, I guess it was." Choking back a sob, he turned and ran off into the woods.

"Luke!" called Troy.

"Let him go Miss Troy, he loved his Granny somethin' fierce, and he needs to be alone with his grievin'," the older of Annie's three sons said as he walked up.

"Well Randy, Luke seems to think you wouldn't hurt his grandmother, so I'm going to let you go." Michael released the grip he still had on his shirt, "but first I'd like to know why you were still hanging around here after you'd gotten your moonshine?"

"Thankee Sheriff, you won't be sorry cause I didn't harm her none." He smiled bleary eyed, "She gave me my bottle and then I walked around the side of the cabin and sat a spell and tried to take care of that bad thirst, and I guess sitting there in the hot sun, I just plain fell asleep, cause the next thing I knew was you were a haulin me to my feet."

"Go on," said Michael giving him a shove, "go home and sleep your thirst off—but if I need you brother, you better be somewhere around close where I can lay a hand on you quick!"

"Yes sir—yes sir." he nodded his head and stumbling began to make his way through the woods.

"Would you like to tell me what happened, Sheriff?" Annie's son spoke up, "Luke came running to tell us his Granny was dead, and then he turned and ran back again before we could question him any."

So Michael took the man inside and showed him where Luke had come in and found his grandmother on the floor. How, when he had reached down to pick her up he had discovered she'd hit her head on the iron stove and been killed; and then how he had run most of the way to town, till a farmer he knew had stopped and given him a lift, and then not finding the doctor in, he had come and told the Sheriff what had happened.

"I drove him back out here," Michael told him, "and then I stopped by and got Miss Troy and Sam so they could come over and keep an eye on things. I went back for the doctor and we came and got Annie and took her into town. I'm very sorry this has happened, your mother was a special kind of person—we're all going to miss her."

The man looked dazed, he shook his head and softly said, "Yes, she was a good woman, and a real fine mother and granny."

"We brought some food over," Troy showed him the covered basket, "do you think any of you will feel like having lunch?"

"Oh Miss Troy, thank you, but no, I don't believe so." He took her hand, "You and Miss Sam go on home now, you can leave the basket and we'll eat later, when the shock has wore off some."

"Is there anything more I can do?"

He looked at her and then he asked, "I don't know much about burying people, would you mind going into town with me and helping me make the funeral plans?"

At the look of pleading in his eyes Troy agreed, though she knew it was going to be a painful task for she had been quite fond of the old woman.

"We'll take my car." Troy directed, "Michael would you drop Sam off at the farm please, and tell them I'll be along after while." And sadly she and Annie's son left for town.

When all arrangements had been made, Troy drove back to Annie's where she left the man, promising to return the next day to help in anyway that she could. Then, giving way to the tears that had long been welling up inside her, she wept the rest of the way home for the old woman who had been a part of her life here at the farm for as long as she could remember.

She arrived home to find Bertha in the kitchen preparing a roast for the engagement dinner, tears streaming down her face and muttering to herself.

"Bertha don't carry on so. She was an old, old woman. "We're all going to have to go someday." And Troy tried in vain to comfort her.

"Oh, she let us play over at her place when we was just babies, and then she be the one told me what kind of formula to mix up to feed my Sadie with," sobbed Bertha. "If it hadn't been for Old Annie I never would have raised that pig at all." She wept bitterly. Patting her on the shoulder Troy left the kitchen, afraid that if she stayed much longer she too would give way to unrestrained weeping.

She found the rest of the family sitting gloomily in the living room, after having heard Sam's version of what had taken place that afternoon at the cabin.

"Well," Jo rose to her feet as Troy entered the room, "we can't sit here all day moping. Annie would think we were all being a bunch of silly fools. Besides that, we've got Jud and Sidney going to be here shortly for dinner and I expect we all better go and get ourselves cleaned up."

"If you don't mind," put in Louise with a hand to her forehead, "I've had a splitting headache all day. Would it bother anyone if I just stayed upstairs this evening?" She looked at Stacy, "I hate to miss your party, but I'm afraid I wouldn't be good company."

"That's all right Louise, I understand" Stacy smiled sweetly at her, "I'm thinking it's not going to be much of a party anyway. You go on to bed, and I'll have Bertha bring up something later."

"Then if you'll excuse me." Louise went up the stairs to her room.

"I've never known her to have headaches before." mused Troy.

"I expect it's the news of Annie's death that's upset her." Sam told Troy, "And then too, she was out in the woods twice today in all that wind. She found the flowers though and made a beautiful arrangement—go in the dining room and see for yourself."

"Thanks, but I will later," she glanced at her watch. "Jo's right, if we don't hurry up the Turners will be here before we've even had our baths." And they all hurriedly left the parlour for their respective rooms to get ready.

"Well," apologized Troy, "I locked him in my bedroom. I cannot imagine why Ta Ta acts this way around you Sidney, it's very embarrasing."

"Anybody have a stupid looking dog like that ought to be embarrassed," put in Jud, "all anyone ought to have is a hunting dog, something you can get some use from."

"How about a drink Jud?" asked Stacy quickly. "We have some excellent sherry that Sidney loves, or perhaps you'd rather have some good old Kentucky bourbon." and she nervously giggled.

"I'll have bourbon—on the rocks." He scowled, "Sidney can do the sherry sipping, but a real man wants something stronger than that to drink."

"I heard you'd been ill Jud," Troy smiled sweetly, "but I must say you've made a marvelous recovery. I don't believe you've changed a bit since the last time we were together, and that must have been ages ago."

"Let's see," he ticked the years off on his fingers, "wasn't that right after your father's funeral, when I came over and offered to take this place off your hands? You should have sold it, all of you would have been better off."

"How's that Jud?" bristled Jo.

"Why you might have left this tumbling down place, met a man and had children like God intended a woman should do." He glared at Sam, "instead of working like a field hand, marching around all day long in pants, and ending up a bunch of old maids."

"You've got to admit Jud, they're certainly a lovely bevy of—" Sidney hesitated at a loss for the right word.

"Old maids Sidney, go ahead and say it for that's exactly what we are." Jo sipped her sherry with relish, "And thank goodness for that, for I'd never have been happy catering to some old man's whims." She glared at Jud, "I suppose I miss not having had children, but I've always been so busy running this place I haven't had much time to think about it, so I guess it hasn't really mattered."

"Your daddy marked everyone of you when he gave you those damn fool names," snapped Jud, "whoever heard of naming a girl Sam!"

Seeing Jo start to turn red, Troy put in, "I hate to change the subject Jud, but have you had any trouble over to your place?"

"What kind of trouble?"

"Broken fences, barns burning, or calves killed for starters."

"Hell no—what kind of an outfit do you think I run?"

"I don't know Jud—I've sometimes wondered though," Troy smiled at him batting her eyelashes.

"Still working those eyes, aren't you?" He chuckled, "I can remember when half the young bucks in the county were after you."

"More than half Jud." Troy informed him icily, "More than half."

"That's right," Jo interposed, "we didn't all turn out to be old maids. Troy had a wonderful marriage and now Toby and Sidney are going to start a life together." She rose and holding her glass high said solemnly, "I propose a toast to the bride and groom to be."

"Though they've but just discovered each other midway through life, may the years that are left to them be filled with joy and delight, eternal love, and constant happiness."

"Nonsense," snapped Jud, "grown women don't cry."

"That's right," agreed Troy, "they only scrub, cook, and bear babies, right Jud?"

"No wonder you had so many of the young men after you Troy, you're a real sensible woman," he beamed at her. "Why don't you try to talk some sense into these sisters of yours and see if you can't get them to let go of this property. I'll pay a good price."

"What on earth do you want with the farm Jud? You have more than you need now, and," Jo's eyes sparked, "you're just as barren as I so what do you need more land for at your age?"

"Part of this land has lain just as barren as you and I for years, and it isn't right, it isn't normal. Land shouldn't be there and not be put to use. That was my grandfather's land and it's been lying there empty because of your hard-headed father and a pack of ignorant lawyers!"

"Now see here Jud Turner," Jo rose to her feet.

"You see here yourself," he cried rising to face her, "that's my land and someday I mean to have it back!"

"Over my dead body."

"Maybe so," snickering he asked, "and who do you think will carry on this place when you're gone?"

"Who says I'm going to go first," she screamed at him.

"I do!" Jud roared back.

"Is that a threat Jud Turner?"

"If that's what you want to call it you skinny old—"

"Dinner is served." announced Bertha standing in the doorway and surveying the scene wide-eyed.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is another installment of a novel, "Sticks and Stones May Break Your Bones," by Cherie Blanton. The installments appear in the paper each Wednesday.

SUMMARY

Last week found Troy and Stacy planning her wedding. They decided to give the couple a wedding in the old conservatory as a present and they are busily making arrangements when Sheriff Ames drives up and tells them that Old Annie has been found dead.

By CHERIE BLANTON

The news of Annie's death had placed a damper on the high spirits of everyone at the farm. They had known the old woman all their lives, and as she was so fond of telling, she had even helped to bring Miss Troy into this world.

As soon as possible, Sam and Troy packed a basket of food and went to Old Annie's to see what they could do; however, no one was there for Luke had made the trip back into the hills to tell his father and Annie's other sons what had happened. The Sheriff returned with the local doctor while the women were still there, and after much discussion one way and the other, Michael was finally forced to agree with them all, that Annie must have suffered a fainting spell, fallen, and struck her temple on the edge of the old iron stove she cooked with.

After all, what would be the point of killing an old lady unless you wanted to rob her, and though there was a fresh scratch on her arm that bothered Michael, she could have easily done that herself earlier in the morning. Nothing looked as though it had been taken or disturbed, and anyway, what would she have had that would be worth killing for—only some moonshine, and she was known to be more than generous with her credit if you didn't have the money for a bottle right then.

They took Annie's pitifully small form away, and Troy and Sam tidied up the breakfast dishes which she hadn't gotten around to doing, did what little straightening up was required, and waited for the men to come home. They didn't want them to have to walk into their mother's place and no one be there, and Michael must have felt the same way, because just before the sons of Annie came home, he returned to the cabin. Finding the two women still there, he sat down at the table with them to wait.

"I'll make some tea." Sam rose, went to the sink and begin to pump water into the teapot that was always sitting on Annie's stove.

"She had a feeling something was going to happen," Troy informed him, "she told me the other day that she had been reading the leaves and she didn't like what she saw in them."

"Do you believe in fortune telling?" asked Michael.

"A little," she replied, "when I was growing up Annie told me a lot of times things that were going to happen—like getting sick, or taking a trip. She even told me the week before I met Edward that she knew the man I loved was soon to enter my life." She thought a moment, "I don't know if she really saw those happenings in the tea leaves or not, but I think in some odd way she did have feelings about events that were about to take place in people's lives. Why she even read the leaves for Louise the day she came over here with me."

"What did she tell her?" Sam asked.

"I don't know," Troy answered, "she sent Luke and me out to the car, and when I asked Louise about it later, she said she was afraid if she told me it wouldn't come true."

"What's that?" cried Michael suddenly alert to a small noise, "You all keep on talking normally, and I'm going to slip out the door and around to the back."

Troy and Sam looked at each other puzzled, and then Sam said, "I wonder when they'll have the funeral?"

"Probably tomorrow afternoon," reasoned Troy, "I think all the family she has lives right here."

Suddenly there was a loud commotion heard coming from the back of the cabin, and the girls both rushed toward the noise, just as the Sheriff came around the side of the building leading Randy Weaks.

"There you are, you lazy good-for-nothing!" Sam spat out to the amazement of the others, "We left you to do that fence and spray those cattle and the minute we turned our back you must have taken off." She faced Michael, "Now that means I have to help do that job and dern, but I hate that more than anything." Wheeling back on Randy she demanded, "where did you get off to anyway?"

"The very question I was going to ask him myself," said the Sheriff, "Where did you go Randy?"

He looked at all three of them and then staggering slightly, it was quite obvious he was very drunk, whined, "Miss Sam it's hot today and that dustin those cattle makes a man thirsty. I came up here to get me a little something to keep my tongue from being so dry."

"You hadn't touched those cattle," Sam advanced towards him furiously, "so how could you be thirsty?"

He hung his head, "Don't be mad Miss Sam, I'll get along out there now and get right on it."

"Oh no, you won't." Michael held him by the collar of his shirt. "You aren't going anywhere till you and I have had a talk."

"What about, Sheriff? I ain't done nothing."

"You can say that again!" snorted Sam.

"I told you Sheriff," he whined, "I came for some moonshine, I was getting a powerful thirst."

"Randy," spoke up Troy, "where did you get the money to pay for the liquor? Jo hasn't paid you your week's wages yet."

"Don't matter none," he answered defiantly, "Annie always gives me credit. She knows I'll pay her soon as I get the money." He shifted his feet from side to side uneasily. "What are you all doing here asking me those questions? Why don't you ask Old Annie—she'll tell you."

"Annie's dead," announced the Sheriff, "and I wouldn't put it past you to have hit her in the head so you could steal some liquor."

"Never—never!" he cried cowering in front of the three of them, "I never would do nothing like that to Annie. She was my friend." Suddenly he began to cry and blubber like all drunks are prone to do. "She was my friend—I didn't do that to her Sheriff, honest."

"I believe him, Sir," Luke walked quietly up behind them, "Granny always gave Randy moonshine whenever he couldn't pay for it, and then he'd pay her later. He talked a lot to her too, and she listened to him just like she did to everybody that came around. He lowered his head, his eyes filling, "I don't believe he'd harm her none Sheriff, fact of the matter is I don't know anybody didn't love my Granny. I guess she was so old, she just gave out and when she fell she hit her head just right." He sighed, "When I was little and would come for a visit she used to carry the firewood in to burn in that stove and she'd say, 'Someday this old stove is gonna be the death of me boy.'--well, I guess it was." Choking back a sob, he turned and ran off into the woods.

"Luke!" called Troy.

"Let him go Miss Troy, he loved his Granny somethin' fierce, and he needs to be alone with his grievin'," the older of Annie's three sons said as he walked up.

"Well Randy, Luke seems to think you wouldn't hurt his grandmother, so I'm going to let you go." Michael released the grip he still had on his shirt, "but first I'd like to know why you were still hanging around here after you'd gotten your moonshine?"

"Thankee Sheriff, you won't be sorry cause I didn't harm her none." He smiled bleary eyed, "She gave me my bottle and then I walked around the side of the cabin and sat a spell and tried to take care of that bad thirst, and I guess sitting there in the hot sun, I just plain fell asleep, cause the next thing I knew was you were a haulin me to my feet."

"Go on," said Michael giving him a shove, "go home and sleep your thirst off—but if I need you brother, you better be somewhere around close where I can lay a hand on you quick!"

"Yes sir—yes sir." he nodded his head and stumbling began to make his way through the woods.

"Would you like to tell me what happened, Sheriff?" Annie's son spoke up, "Luke came running to tell us his Granny was dead, and then he turned and ran back again before we could question him any."

So Michael took the man inside and showed him where Luke had come in and found his grandmother on the floor. How, when he had reached down to pick her up he had discovered she'd hit her head on the iron stove and been killed; and then how he had run most of the way to town, till a farmer he knew had stopped and given him a lift, and then not finding the doctor in, he had come and told the Sheriff what had happened.

"I drove him back out here," Michael told him, "and then I stopped by and got Miss Troy and Sam so they could come over and keep an eye on things. I went back for the doctor and we came and got Annie and took her into town. I'm very sorry this has happened, your mother was a special kind of person—we're all going to miss her."

The man looked dazed, he shook his head and softly said, "Yes, she was a good woman, and a real fine mother and granny."

"We brought some food over," Troy showed him the covered basket, "do you think any of you will feel like having lunch?"

"Oh Miss Troy, thank you, but no, I don't believe so." He took her hand, "You and Miss Sam go on home now, you can leave the basket and we'll eat later, when the shock has wore off some."

"Is there anything more I can do?"

He looked at her and then he asked, "I don't know much about burying people, would you mind going into town with me and helping me make the funeral plans?"

At the look of pleading in his eyes Troy agreed, though she knew it was going to be a painful task for she had been quite fond of the old woman.

"We'll take my car." Troy directed, "Michael would you drop Sam off at the farm please, and tell them I'll be along after while." And sadly she and Annie's son left for town.

When all arrangements had been made, Troy drove back to Annie's where she left the man, promising to return the next day to help in anyway that she could. Then, giving way to the tears that had long been welling up inside her, she wept the rest of the way home for the old woman who had been a part of her life here at the farm for as long as she could remember.

She arrived home to find Bertha in the kitchen preparing a roast for the engagement dinner, tears streaming down her face and muttering to herself.

"Bertha don't carry on so. She was an old, old woman. "We're all going to have to go someday." And Troy tried in vain to comfort her.

"Oh, she let us play over at her place when we was just babies, and then she be the one told me what kind of formula to mix up to feed my Sadie with," sobbed Bertha. "If it hadn't been for Old Annie I never would have raised that pig at all." She wept bitterly. Patting her on the shoulder Troy left the kitchen, afraid that if she stayed much longer she too would give way to unrestrained weeping.

She found the rest of the family sitting gloomily in the living room, after having heard Sam's version of what had taken place that afternoon at the cabin.

"Well," Jo rose to her feet as Troy entered the room, "we can't sit here all day moping. Annie would think we were all being a bunch of silly fools. Besides that, we've got Jud and Sidney going to be here shortly for dinner and I expect we all better go and get ourselves cleaned up."

"If you don't mind," put in Louise with a hand to her forehead, "I've had a splitting headache all day. Would it bother anyone if I just stayed upstairs this evening?" She looked at Stacy, "I hate to miss your party, but I'm afraid I wouldn't be good company."

"That's all right Louise, I understand" Stacy smiled sweetly at her, "I'm thinking it's not going to be much of a party anyway. You go on to bed, and I'll have Bertha bring up something later."

"Then if you'll excuse me." Louise went up the stairs to her room.

"I expect it's the news of Annie's death that's upset her." Sam told Troy, "And then too, she was out in the woods twice today in all that wind. She found the flowers though and made a beautiful arrangement—go in the dining room and see for yourself."

"Thanks, but I will later," she glanced at her watch. "Jo's right, if we don't hurry up the Turners will be here before we've even had our baths." And they all hurriedly left the parlour for their respective rooms to get ready.

"Well," apologized Troy, "I locked him in my bedroom. I cannot imagine why Ta Ta acts this way around you Sidney, it's very embarrasing."

"Anybody have a stupid looking dog like that ought to be embarrassed," put in Jud, "all anyone ought to have is a hunting dog, something you can get some use from."

"How about a drink Jud?" asked Stacy quickly. "We have some excellent sherry that Sidney loves, or perhaps you'd rather have some good old Kentucky bourbon." and she nervously giggled.

"I'll have bourbon—on the rocks." He scowled, "Sidney can do the sherry sipping, but a real man wants something stronger than that to drink."

"I heard you'd been ill Jud," Troy smiled sweetly, "but I must say you've made a marvelous recovery. I don't believe you've changed a bit since the last time we were together, and that must have been ages ago."

"Let's see," he ticked the years off on his fingers, "wasn't that right after your father's funeral, when I came over and offered to take this place off your hands? You should have sold it, all of you would have been better off."

"How's that Jud?" bristled Jo.
